ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

Mrs. Beazley and sons, Adelphi Hotel, Waterford, wish to return sincere thanks for the many letters and telegrams of sympathy received in their recent bereavement.

Mrs. Fullerton and family wish to thank the many kind friends who sympathised with them in their recent bereavement, and trust they will accept this acknowledgment.

Mr. and Mrs. Wright and family desire to return thanks to the many kind friends who sent letters of sympathy to them in their recent sad bereavement, and hope they will accept same, as they are too numerous to answer.

IN MEMORIAM.

JOHNSTON—In sad and loving memory of our dear daughter, Lizzie, who lost her life on top of a tram-car in Parkgate st., Dublin, on July 11th, 1911.

We little thought her time was short
In this world to remain,
That when she left her home that day
She would never return again.

Inserted by her heartbroken father and mother, John and Jane S. Johnston.

Harmony.

THERE are some women whose clothes seem to be part of themselves. Everything such a woman wears seems to belong to a carefully considered plan, the elements of which have been successfully brought into complete harmony one with another. Without the aid of properly constructed corsets, however, no such effect is possible. J.B. Corsets are planned and executed by experts who understand the value of harmony and the principles of proportion.

SPORTING NEWS.

LIMERICK JUNCTION MEETING—YESTERDAY.

SECOND DAY.

Yesterday's racing suffered by comparison with the previous day's, but the weather being again of a genial character, the outing proved enjoyable. Backers' luck continued over the first two races, which fell to odds-on favourites, and following a walk-over in the next race, Happy Hours, by winning the Moderate Plate, completed the ninth score in succession for the punters. Both Kirkharle and Yorkshire Lad, the only runners for the Directors' Plate, jumped the hurdles badly, and the latter being almost down half a mile from home, Kirkharle had no difficulty in winning. Saxham Prince treated his moderate opponents in the Welter Plate with scant respect, and once taking the lead half a mile from home was never afterwards approached. Mr. E. Desmond had Changed Times and Monsieur Thomas in readiness for the Sprinters' Plate, but when it was decided not to run Gluckvogel filly, he withdrew Changed Times, and allowed Monsieur Thomas to walk over. Happy Hours looked like being troubled by Edgar's Gambler in the Moderate Plate, but the latter jumped the rails and fell at the entrance to the straight, giving D. Ward a bad fall, from which he sustained slight concussion. Hadrief and Tully, the fancied candidates for the Novices' Steeplechase, both fell, the former at the first fence, and the latter, who was leading at the time, at the second last. With the pair removed, Rocklight held Golden Rose at bay, and won somewhat cleverly; while in the Stayers' Plate, Finn-ma-Coul, profiting by a bad blunder at the last fence by Ballyheen, got up to win luckily. Details:—

2.30—DIRECTORS' PLATE, 100 sovs. A hurdle race. 1 m. 6 f.
Mr. A. H. Straker's b. c. KIRKHARLE, by Thrush—Ponteland, 4, 10-6 .... T. Burns 1
Capt. Delmege's YORKSHIRE LAD, a, 10-0 Mr. L. L. Firth 2
(Winner trained by Mr. J. A. B. Trench). Betting—2 to 1 on KIRKHARLE, who made all the running, and won in a canter by thirty lengths.

3.0—WELTER PLATE, 100 sovs. A flat race. 2 m.
Mr. M'Keever's b. h. SAXHAM PRINCE, by Saxham—Galloping Ivy, 5, 11-10 Mr. H. S. Harrison 1
Mr. A. M'Cann's WATERLOG, 4, 10-2 W. Barrett 2
Major Dixon's SANTOX, 4, 10-0 Mr. L. L. Firth 3
Also ran:—Lady Glenbrook (Mr. N. Sikes), Czarita mare (Mr. V. Hartigan), Judy M'Cann (M. Beary). (Winner trained by Mr. R. H. Walker.) Betting—7 to 4 on SAXHAM PRINCE, 3 to 1 agst. Waterlog, 6 to 1 Judy M'Cann, 100 to 8 Czarita mare, 20 to 1 others. Waterlog led from Czarita mare, Saxham Prince, Lady Glenbrook, and Santox until half a mile from home, when Saxham Prince drew out, and won easily by two lengths; twelve lengths. Judy M'Cann 4th.

3.30—SPRINTERS' PLATE, 100 sovs. 2-Y.O. 5 f.
Mr. E. Desmond's ch. c. MONSIEUR, by Tomas-an-Appagh—Alwine, 8-0 ..... E. M. Quirke w.o.
(Winner trained by M. Farragher). Bought in for 80 sovs.

4.0—MODERATE PLATE, 75 sovs. A flat race. 1½ m.
Mr. P. W. Shaw's ch. m. HAPPY HOURS, by St. Monan's—Lady Bagnal, 5, 11-0 M. Beary 1
Mr. B. O'Donnell's QUEEN ELF, 3, 10-0 H. Harty 2
Capt. Magaw's M. by KROONSTAD—FOLLOW ME LADS, 5, 11-0 .... J. Moylan 3
Also ran:—Kate Hawker (A. Hogan), Say (E. Quirke), Edgar's Gambler (D. Ward). (Winner trained by Mr. Fetherston.) Betting—5 to 4 on HAPPY HOURS, 3 to 1 agst. Queen Elf, 4 to 1 Kate Hawker, 5 to 1 Edgar's Gambler, 20 to 1 Say, 100 to 1 Follow Me Lads mare. Say set the pace to Queen Elf, Follow Me Lads mare, Happy Hours, and Edgar's Gambler, until half a mile from home, when Happy Hours drew out, followed by Edgar's Gambler, who jumped the rails, and fell at the entrance to the straight, Happy Hours then going on to win in a canter by fifteen lengths; twelve lengths. Say 4th.

4.30—NOVICES' STEEPLECHASE, 100 sovs. 2½ m.
Mr. T. Flood's b. h. ROCKLIGHT, by Rockaway—Bright Bart, 6, 10-2 .... P. Powell 1

Also ran:—Aunt Strange (N. Hayes), Hadrief (T. Burns), Tully (J. Cahalan). (Winner trained Privately.) Betting—5 to 4 agst. Hadrief, 2 to 1 Tully, 6 to 1 each Golden Rose and ROCKLIGHT, 10 to 1 Aunt Strange. Hadrief fell at the first fence, and Golden Rose made the running from Rocklight, Tully, and Aunt Strange until half a mile from home, when Tully went away clear of Rocklight and Golden Rose. Tully fell at the second last fence, and Rocklight, holding Golden Rose at bay, won by half a length. Aunt Strange did not complete the course.

5.0—STAYERS' PLATE of 55 sovs. A steeplechase. 3 m.
Mr. R. R. Adamson's b. h. FINN-MA-COUL, by Monfin—Great Time, 5, 12-1 ..... T. Burns 1
Lord Kenmare's BALLYHEEN, 6, 10-7 J. Meany 2
(Winner trained by Mr. M. Arnott). Betting—5 to 4 on Ballyheen. Finn-ma-Coul led until half a mile from home, when Ballyheen went to the front, but made a bad mistake at the last fence, and was overhauled by Finn-ma-Coul, who won by six lengths.

PONTEFRACT MEETING—YESTERDAY.

SPORTING PARAGRAPHS.

T. Burns rode two winners at Limerick Junction yesterday—Kirkharle in the Directors' Plate, and Finn-ma-Coul in the Stayers' Plate.

According to present intentions, Athlone will be sent to Liverpool to run in the Molyneux Plate on the 24th.

When Edgar's Gambler jumped the rails and fell, when running in the Moderate Plate at Limerick Junction yesterday, D. Ward got a bad fall, and sustained slight concussion.

The Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, which was commissioned recently, has been on a short trial cruise down Channel, and made a brief stay in Tor Bay.

Danseilon was, it appears, sold conditionally that he did not run again in Europe, and he will not, therefore, fulfil his engagement in the Prix du Conseil Municipal.

The following have been struck out of the Galway Plate:—Lady Lightfoot, MacDermott, Halston, Reask, and Clonard; and A.A., Second Fiddle, Gemsbok, Lance Chest, Lover True, and King Michael from the Galway Hurdle Race.

No further attempt will be made to train Herself, who has been spoken of in many quarters as a likely winner of the Cambridgeshire. The filly, who has run three times unsuccessfully this season, was covered by Son-in-Law some time ago.

At a meeting in London of the British Pony and Galloway Racing Association it was decided, on the motion of Sir Wm. Bass, Bart., seconded by Lord Sempill, to wind up the association, which was formed in 1899 for the encouragement and management of pony racing.

American advices report the death of a valuable yearling by Aleppo—Pollyhill, by Polymelus. The dam was purchased in this country last year, and sent to the United States while in foal by Commander J. K. L. Ross. She was placed on the Yarrow Brae Farm, in Maryland.

Mr. H. Roper Barrett, the well-known lawn tennis player, who has been a member of the Corporation of the City of London for the last ten years, has been presented with a piece of jewellery at the Guildhall in recognition of his services last year as Chairman of the Streets Committee of the Corporation.

ELIZABETHAN ULSTER.

Lord Ernest Hamilton's story of Elizabethan Ulster is an excellent account of a very tangled period of Irish history. That the author should be absolutely without prejudice is not to be expected. However he has come by it, every historian and student of affairs, Irish particularly, has a standpoint. But the most bigoted partisan will not convict Lord Ernest Hamilton of suppression of any material facts, or of any arrière pensée, such as the making of political capital out of events several centuries old. Scores of men, and a few women, walk across his stage, but all are presented dispassionately. The author has no heroes, Irish or English. In fact, we should not be surprised if his final award on the men of that time who played important parts in the struggle for dominance in Ireland, on either side, should be that, judged by modern standards, there was scarcely one honest, merciful, and Christian-like man among them. The chiefs ravaged one another's territory; they waylaid, imprisoned, and murdered inconvenient rivals and enemies; and they oppressed their own churls brutally. One of them, Neil Garv, said: "Innishowen is mine, and, were there but one cow in the country, that cow would I take, and use as mine own . . . . . For my people, they are my subjects. I will punish, exact, cut, and hang where and whenever I list."

As in the Scottish Highlands during the clan stage, so in Ulster and in Ireland generally, the main business of the chiefs and their retainers was fighting, cattle-lifting, and revelling. Had these quarrelsome gentry only broken one another's heads it would have mattered little, but, unfortunately for the peasant population, they preferred the less dangerous pastime of cattle-raiding. It was the churl's cattle which they drove off, his home they burnt, his corn they cut down. The peasant was invariably the chief sufferer under whatever chieftain. Shane O'Neill, returning from a cattle-raid, into Tirconnell, where he seized several thousand beasts, fell upon Maguire's harvesters at Belleek and killed 300 men, women, and children. This was, no doubt, the custom of the country, but it is surely, therefore, ridiculously misleading to describe, as some writers do, Shane O'Neill as a "chivalrous" fighter. Even the great Earl of Tyrone, Hugh O'Neill, a man of broader mind than other contemporary chiefs, could not resist the temptation at times to pillage and burn. After the landing of the Spanish at Kinsale, at the very crisis of his and Ireland's fate, the Earl, instead of moving south to form a junction with the Spaniards, wasted six invaluable weeks in ravaging Louth and Meath. When finally he did move, he wasted more time pillaging in Westmeath. These "wanton and insensate acts of destruction," as Lord Ernest Hamilton justly describes them, committed by a man who claimed the over-lordship of Ulster, if not of all Ireland, reveal the incurable weakness and evil of the clan system. Under it neither national unity nor social order was possible, and society remained, on the whole, unprogressive.

The English policy in Ireland in Tudor times was not calculated to end those evils; indeed, it aggravated them. English commanders too often fomented clan quarrels on the principle of divide et impera. During their frequent punitive expeditions they ravaged and pillaged after the native fashion. They were guilty of many bloody deeds of slaughter against both the Irish and the Scots in Ulster. It was English soldiers, under John Norris, who massacred some 600 defenceless McDonnells (of the McDonalds of the Isles), most of whom were women and children, in the Island of Rathlin. It casts a revealing light on the temper of those times to learn that this foul deed appears to have stirred no indignation in England or in Ireland. For the vanquished and helpless there was no mercy. Spanish sailors out of the great Armada, cast away on the Western shores, were almost all murdered by those into whose hands they fell, whether English or Irish; but nobody expressed any horror at such crimes.

Tyrone's rebellion, after lingering long, and being more than once astonishingly near success, had the Earl possessed more daring, was finally crushed easily by three honest men who were neither to be bribed nor cozened—Lord Mountjoy, Chichester, and Docwra. Their system was to starve out the enemy, and to this end they laid waste large portions of Antrim and Down and Tyrone. Of necessity this produced famine and a vast amount of suffering, particularly in those parts of Antrim and Down within reach of Sir Arthur Chichester; and much odium has attached to Mountjoy and Chichester for their methods of warfare. Yet, as Lord Ernest Hamilton remarks, "the devastation of an enemy's country was at the time universally recognised as a legitimate method of warfare. It was extensively practised on the Continent, and was invariably used by the Irish chiefs in their inter-tribal disputes."

Whether any salutary moral for our times may be deduced from this page out of the history of the English in Ireland it would be, indeed, hard to say. There will be some to declare that it were better to forget this history, but such a self-stultifying moral no historian could commend; nor may any political moral be drawn, save, perhaps, this—that there are some political problems insoluble save by good-will. So long as men remain aloof, nursing their passions of hate or contempt, no good thing can be wrought between them, and it is these two passions which have poisoned the springs of Irish life for centuries. Lord Ernest Hamilton's book is not a political essay, but an honest attempt at history, written with painstaking care to present all the salient facts. The slight flavour of humour in his style, its clearness, and his gift of narrative combine to make the volume eminently readable. The absence of an index, however, greatly impairs its value for the busy student, and it would be an improvement if the dates of the events recorded were set forth either in the margin or at the head of every chapter. If Lord Ernest Hamilton could pursue his studies in Ulster history and give us a volume on the seventeenth century—a period which, though much less picturesque, was more decisive

WANDERINGS IN ITALY.

Throughout the war few books of travel have been issued, and, therefore, we welcome the notable volume which M. Gabriel Faure has written. Piedmont-Lombardy, Emilia, Umbria, Venetia, Tyrol, Friuli, and New Italy—these are the regions of his wanderings. He traverses them with the eye of an artist and the pen of a scholar. Many readers will turn eagerly to the account of the Italia no longer irredenta. "The day has come," writes M. Faure. "The Italian flag floats over the arsenal and San Giusto, as the poet foretold in his superb 'Ode on the Latin Resurrection,' written at the beginning of the war. Italy will be able to grave the blazon of the House of Savoy 'on the stone of Roman Pola, on the Adriatic restored to the Lion.' The windows of Trieste are a-flutter with the banners prepared by her people in silence, in the secrecy of their homes and the passion of their hearts." Other readers will turn no less eagerly to the pages describing places that they know—for example, the charming description of the lovely district of Orta. The author hits off the characteristics of the district admirably, maintaining that the Lake of Orta is less wild than that of Lugano, less voluptuous than Lario, less grandiose than Maggiore, and with more general harmony than any one of them.

M. Faure has been at Como in company with Maurice Barrès and with Henri Taine, and notes that the latter characteristically devoted more pages to Como Cathedral than to the lake. It is clear that M. Faure feels the fascination of what Taine has written, for he himself discusses the mingling of Italian and Gothic in the works of the Renaissance. He points out that Lombard sculpture is above all ornamental, and that its object is to contribute to the general effect—that Lombard artists are decorators rather than sculptors. Unlike Taine, however, he returns to the lake, reviving happy memories by his exquisite word-pictures. M. Faure is describing Iseo when he remarks that "the lakes of Savoy, of Bavaria, and of Switzerland are too cold, too sublime, or too austere; they lack the nobility, the perfect proportion, and also the languor we find in combination here on this declivity of the Alps which looks down on the land of light and beauty. Taine, who extolled Lake Como, never really loved." Certainly M. Faure loves, and he communicates his love to his readers.

A MOTHER'S POSTBAG.

"John Ayscough" is the literary pseudonym of Monsignor Bickerstaffe-Drew, who was Senior (Roman Catholic) Chaplain to the Forces at Salisbury Plain before the war, and served as a chaplain in France from 1914 until he was invalided home early in 1916. The three hundred letters which this volume contains were written by him to his mother while he was on active service. His cousin, Mr. F. Bickerstaffe-Drew, contributes an interesting introduction. The mother to whom these letters were written must have been a very fine type of womanhood—a woman of sweet disposition and lively intellect—and she was blessed above her fellows in the intense bond of love and devotion which existed between her son and herself. She was the daughter of an Irish clergyman, the Rev. Pierce W. Drew, of Heathfield Towers, County Cork, for twenty-five years Rector of Youghal. She had the characteristic of her race—humour—in a very marked degree, and, as these letters show, she transmitted it to her son.

The outstanding feature of the letters is their invariable cheerfulness. Mr. F. Bickerstaffe-Drew tells us that "it was the son's one preoccupation to bridge that absence (from his mother) as much as was simply possible by unfailing frequency of letters, and further, by seldom in those letters allowing her to picture him as in danger or discomfort." Personally, we think that it was as much his indomitable Irish cheerfulness which enabled John Ayscough to ignore discomfort as any deliberate effort for another's sake. The letters form a curious sort of panorama of our hopes and fears, day by day throughout the early years of the war. Thus it is amusing, in an ironic sense, to read that "Austria cannot fight much longer, and would not be fighting now, if she pleased herself. I believe that the enemy will soon want an armistice." One glances at the date on which these words were penned—"October 24th, 1914"! To review a book of this kind in any adequate manner is well nigh impossible, for it is a kaleidoscope of impressions, observations, anecdotes, and gossip. The real charm of such a book is in its revelation of the writer's personality. In this case it is the revelation of a singularly charming personality—that of a man who, amid the toils, discomforts, and dangers of war, never forgot for a single day his aged and lonely mother in England.

AFFORESTATION.

The end of the war confronts us with a world-shortage of timber. Not only have the extravagant demands of the past four years cut deeply into our supplies, but a general policy of laissez faire has taken no thought for the needs of the morrow. Timber must be water-borne; it is unable to bear the heavy charges of rail transit. Experts tell us that in Canada and the United States the supply of timber capable of water-carriage has nearly been exhausted. The Swedish and Norwegian supplies are not inexhaustible, and home forests have been denuded ruthlessly. France and Germany may nearly supply their own needs, while Russia will remain a closed book for some time. Hence there is an urgent necessity of a broad and enlightened policy in dealing with such a vital question as the provision of a suitable supply of timber for our future needs.

Mr. Webster, who is an acknowledged authority, tells us that at present we have less than 3,000,000 acres of woodlands, or only 4 per cent. of the total area of land in the United Kingdom. It is estimated that between twelve and fifteen million acres of waste land are suitable for tree-planting. He proposes that 3,000,000 acres shall be devoted to this object, and—in order to reduce expenses—that the operations shall be spread over a period of twenty-five years. The cost, including the purchase of the necessary land, would work out at £900,000 a year. He points out, among the advantages of such a course, that by the time when the last portion was dealt with, the section first planted should be worth at least £60 per acre, which might be regarded as a yearly permanent return.

"National Afforestation" deals very lucidly with the subject of tree-planting by the State, and goes fully into the details of expenditure and receipts. Mr. Webster advocates the establishment of properly constituted Government schools of forestry, and points out the advantages of utilising the services of persons otherwise unemployed for these purposes.

Mr. E. P. Stebbings, the Director of the Department of Forestry in Edinburgh University, is no less insistent in urging the absolute necessity of afforestation on commercial lines. He gives a brief résumé of the timber situation in the various supplying countries, and it is of a thoroughly disquieting character. He also points out the value of small-holder settlements on the outskirts of reafforested areas, and is whole-hearted in his support of national, as against private, ownership of our forests. Both authors deal in most interesting, though dissimilar, fashions with the history of forest work in England

INDO-CHINA.

Captain Henry Baudeson has explored regions little known to the traveller, and his narrative will interest those who care for the out-of-the-way places of the earth. Adventure there is in abundance, and matter also for the anthropologist. It is amazing to one who lives amid western civilisation to remember that there are peoples with the outlook which the author so freshly describes. Behind all that Captain Baudeson writes it is manifest that he strives to understand the native mind in all the moods which it employs. He does not appear to have committed the common fault of the Western inquirer—the suggestion by means of questions given to the native, which sometimes put into his mouth the answer desired. The first part deals with the Moi and the second with the Cham, and the author invests his survey with reality. He notes the industries, the occupations, the family and social life, the religious beliefs and rites, the superstitions, the art and culture of both tribes. Has he to describe the intellectual life of the Moi? At once we are given an account of the relations existing between the development of language and social evolution.

We envy Captain Baudeson his distinct gift of seeing the universal behind the particular. It is by no means a common gift with the traveller, and certainly it lends a value quite its own to his travels. Is it true that the craving for æsthetic expression, inherent in human nature, lies dormant until men have taken their first steps in the path of civilisation? The author raises this question in the case of the Moi, and compares their case with that of the neighbouring tribe, the Laotians. Then he proceeds to generalise. Music, he holds, usually excites the listener to movement or action. This is probably because, originally, music was always associated with miming and dancing, and the effect is still felt after the cause has disappeared. However that may be, music has always inspired men to high deeds, whether by acting as an intellectual stimulant to the listener whose brain dwarfs his muscles, or as a physical stimulant to those in whom matter dominates mind. Music inspired Dante with some of his profoundest poems and John Stuart Mill with some of his most original speculations.

THE ETERNAL PROBLEM.

Here is yet another "solution" of the Irish question, and not the least of its merits is that it is definite and brief. Mr. Rolleston sees in the legend of the Holy Grail an allegory of Ireland—"Ireland with its bitter and barren politics, its incomprehensible administration, its seeming-hopeless isolation from the tide of the world's life; yet with its immense potential destinies and its splendid human capacity—courage, energy, devotion, without limit, all running to waste like some Central Asian river swallowed up in the desert sand." Will the allegory prove itself to be a true one, and will an "Irish Parsifal" appear to find the Holy Grail of peace and contentment for his distracted country? So far he has not come. "Yet our time is short, and Ireland's great opportunity may have vanished before we realise what has slipped for ever from our witless hands."

Mr. Rolleston, like Mr. George Moore, whose letter to The Times he quotes, sees a solution of the Irish question in economic lines of development. He urges the making of a great trans-Atlantic port at Galway, or some other of the "great ocean-harbours in the West," and the linking up of Ireland with England "by a tunnel (say, from Antrim to the Scottish coast, which would bring Protestant Ireland advantageously into the scheme) or by a train ferry." We complain that England has always stood in our light, and we cannot get England, physically, out of our light; "but what can we do—so long as we hold our present position in the Imperial Parliament—is to make England our passage-way to success. That is the talisman!" Mr. Rolleston bitterly reproaches the Irish Parliamentary Party with having permitted "the gross scandal of the Cunard Company's breach of contract," whereby the mail-boats ceased to call at Queenstown. He further urges that an economic policy is the one which divides us least, and that, "when we have for some time been accustomed to united action for Irish objects, Protestant and Roman Catholic will have a basis of mutual understanding such as has never existed before." But he does not tell us precisely how the Sinn Fein Party—at least the extremists in it—are to be induced to co-operate in an economic development which is opposed to their Colbertist schemes. Whether we agree with the author's solution or not, he has given us much food for serious thought in this little pamphlet.

THE TOY CART.

Mr. Symons's new play owes its inspiration to a classic of Indian literature—the Mrichchhakati of Sudraka, Rajah of Magadha. Not being acquainted with this famous Hindu drama, we are unable to judge whether or not Mr. Symons has borrowed much from it. We are inclined to think that the sum total of his indebtedness extends to the scheme of his drama, and no more. The plot is simple. Charadutta, the Brahmin, is a virtuous man, who has been reduced to penury by his liberality, and has been deserted by his former acquaintances as soon as they had plucked him bare—all save one, Maitreya, another Brahmin. Charadutta is in love with the beautiful dancer and courtesan, Vasantasena; but she is also the object of the passion of Prince Samsthanaka, brother-in-law of the king. The story is woven round these four central characters, while Charadutta's motherless son, Rohasena, with his toy cart made of clay, from which the title of the play is derived, and Rambha—Vasantasena's procuress mother—fill rôles necessary to the unravelling of the plot. In the end the pure love of the Brahmin is triumphant over the Prince's lust, and Vasantasena finds happiness in a good man's love.

It is difficult to convey to Western readers the atmosphere of an Eastern drama, and we feel that the author has been led to two extremes. On the one hand, he has used such common-place expressions as "lying about," "at his perfect convenience," and "I am fainting what with the heat and the emotion." On the other hand, he commits such literary banalities as "O rose, rose, the joy of love is forever!" and the comparison of a lute to "a sea-pearl." Thus at one and the same time he uses the language of the country-side and that of the decadent school in literature. Nevertheless, "The Toy Cart" is, in many respects, an achievement worthy of Mr. Symons, and the experiment is justified by a considerable measure of success.

RECENT FICTION.

War, as an educational influence in the widest sense, is applied to Blankhampton in this simple narrative. Bill Hollis, despised failure as a greengrocer, is metamorphosed into a smart and useful member of the B.E.F. His wife, Melia, is restored to the favour of her father, the self-made autocrat, Josiah Munt, and blossoms into a capital woman of business. Her sister, Sally, who has been cast off after an escapade in the rôle of "suffragette," goes to Serbia, and distinguishes herself in war-work. The reader is bound to enjoy Bill's triumph as a wounded hero, Sally's elevation to celebrity, and Josiah's change of heart. It all makes very pleasant reading—this mixture of humour and pathos. The author will touch many a reminiscent chord with his picture of the friendship between Private Hollis, late greengrocer, and Private Stanning, Royal Academician, struck up in the true camaraderie of camp and trench, where every man can gauge the worth of his neighbour.

"Love Lane." By J. C. Snaith. Collins. 7/- net.

Mr. Roberts's subject—world-evolution—will prove an alluring field of discovery and surmise for all time, and he treats it in a fascinating manner. The development and subsequent extinction of prehistoric fauna are woven naturally, with excellent effect, into his story of Grôm and A-ya, members of the tribe of the First Cave-Folk. Grôm, it is true, is credited with a breadth of vision that would mark him for distinction in our twentieth century; but even a chronicler of the primeval period may be allowed a weakness for his hero. The Caveman's successful experiment with fire—which is thereupon hailed as a new god by the tribe—is plausibly narrated; but a development that strikes us as being, perhaps, premature by a million years or so is A-ya's acquired taste for cooked meats.

If this be a first book, there is reason to congratulate the writer on the promise shown, but she has been content to work upon a banal plot. St. Just, the world-worn cynic, Joan, most innocent of beautiful barbarians, and her sophisticated aunt, Lady Kaye, are all working for the well-being of Joan. Their scheming is nearly brought to naught, however, by one Mrs. Halden—"a tall, slim figure, with the sinuousness of a tiger in her gliding movements." We advise the author to eschew "sinuous tigers" and even "eyes full of slumbering golden fires" in her next venture.

DUBLIN COUNTY COUNCIL.

EXCESSIVE SPEED OF MOTOR CARS.

THE ABSORPTION OF IRISH SHIPPING COMPANIES.

Mr. P. J. O'Neill presided at an adjourned meeting of the Dublin County Council yesterday.

Mr. Newcombe moved:—

That the Secretary direct the attention of the Inspector-General, R.I.C., to the excessive speed of motorists on county roads, resulting in danger to the public and injury to the roads; and that a speed limit be fixed by the Council for motorists travelling on county roads passing through villages.

They had discussed this matter at the last meeting, he said, and it was generally agreed that, since the embargo was taken off petrol and so many people had motors, there was a great deal of excessive speed. He included military motorists as well as civil. He had seen the Chairman of the Automobile Club, and found that they were anxious that there should be moderate driving, and they were in communication with the military authorities in order that rules should be framed for military motorists.

Mr. Field seconded, and quoted Blackrock as a point where the danger of too fast driving was most noticeable.

Mr. Shannon pointed out that this subject had been several times discussed by the Council, but no action had been taken because of the difficulty of fixing a limit. They had all felt that there were places on the road where even six miles an hour would be too fast.

The Chairman said that that was so. If the Council fixed a low limit that might be taken as justifying drivers in going at a rate in some circumstances which certainly would be dangerous.

Mr. Mahony said that, for some reason or other, the police during the past week seemed to be keeping a better eye on motorists.

Mr. Butler said that the only dangerous driving that he saw in North Dublin was by the military motorists.

Mr. Clarke reminded the Council that the police magistrate, Mr. Lupton, in a case against a military man, said that he could not deal with it. That was surprising.

The Chairman agreed. There was certainly in London only one rule for civilians and military.

The resolution was adopted, with the exception of that portion referring to the fixing of a speed limit. It was decided to call the attention of the Chief Commissioner, D.M.P., to the matter also.

IRISH SHIPPING INTERESTS.

Mr. Mahony said that they had heard with concern that the ships of the City of Dublin Steam Packet Company had been acquired by a British syndicate. That had followed the absorption of the Tedcastle Company, which was preceded by the City of Cork Steamship Company, and, with the exception of one small company—that running between Newry and Liverpool—practically all the facilities on this side were now controlled by a huge trust on the other side of the Channel. This would hit Ireland, both in imports and exports, because charges were bound to go up. He regretted that the great Irish railways had not taken action. It had been surmised that the City of Dublin Steamship Company were in the market, and, if their ships had been acquired by the Great Southern and the Midland Railways, they would probably have got the cattle trade transit of Ireland into their own control, in their own interests, and the interests of the country. But they lay low, or continued in the old course, and refused to take any risk. This was a matter of national concern.

Mr. Field moved:—

That this Council views with alarm the absorption of the Irish shipping and carrying companies by British syndicates, and expresses its surprise that the railway companies have not taken some action to safeguard transport facilities at fair rates for export and import to and from Ireland of agricultural produce and manufactures.

Mr. Mahony seconded, and the motion was passed.

A Valencia telegram, dated Wednesday, states:—A disturbance arose in the course of a meeting of trade unionists in the commune of Largo, near Valencia, as the result of which the Mayor ordered the gendarmerie to restore order. The crowd received the gendarmes with stones and revolver shots. The gendarmerie then fired on the demonstrators, four persons being killed, four seriously injured, and several slightly wounded.

DUBLIN PORT AND DOCKS BOARD.

ALLEGED DIVERSION OF TRAFFIC

The weekly meeting of the Dublin Port and Docks Board was held yesterday, Mr. R. K. Gamble, Vice-Chairman, presiding.

DREDGING.

The dredging return showed there were 5,657 tons dredged during the week, as against 17,688 tons during the corresponding week last year.

Mr. Field asked were they not in a position to increase the dredging.

The Chairman said the Sandpiper was under repair.

Alderman Moran explained that the dredging carried on by the Sandpiper was for filling up reclaimed land. The actual dredging of the river was being carried on as usual by the dredging plant.

ALLEGED DIVERSION OF TRAFFIC.

The Dublin Industrial Development Association wrote under date 2nd July forwarding the following extracts from a letter addressed to the Association by a Dublin firm of exporters—"We are endeavouring to fulfil a standing order for Irish linens, damask, and union cloths, but we are up against a deliberate, sinister, and, we fear, successful effort to boycott the port of Dublin, and to divert the Scotch trade to Belfast. Some time ago Messrs. G. and J. Burns ran a steamer nightly from Dublin to Ardrossan and Glasgow, and two on Thursdays. There is only one steamer weekly now. This comes of allowing this Glasgow company to absorb an Irish-owned and efficient line. This sailing referred to takes place on Monday, and the Laird Line sail another boat on Thursday; that is to say, two boats weekly out of the port of Dublin. What impels us to write to draw attention to a matter that should be the concern of every businessman in Dublin is that we stand a good chance of losing our contract owing to this want of shipping from Dublin. . . A case of goods which we sent away on 31st May had not reached its destination in Scotland on 18th June, although booked express and passenger train, and upon enquiry we learn that it only left Dublin port on 12th June."

The Secretary stated that on 3rd July he wrote the Secretary of the Admiralty as follows:—

"I am directed by the Dublin Port and Docks Board to ask the serious attention of the Lords of the Admiralty to the necessity that exists to release cattle carrying steamers belonging to Messrs. G. and J. Burns, Ltd., so that provision may be made for providing accommodation for the cattle shipping season, which, it is expected, will commence early next month."

The Secretary further read a copy of his reply to the Secretary of the Dublin Mercantile Association, dated 4th July, as follows:—

"I am directed by the Dublin Port and Docks Board to acquaint you in reply that the delay referred to was caused by labour troubles. Any delay in transit is outside the functions of this Board, as every facility has been provided by the Board for the accommodation of traffic. It is well known that there are delays to goods in transit over the British railway systems and also at British ports due to the congestion of traffic on account of labour shortage and shorter number of working hours. I am at the same time to state that, from comprehensive statistics put before the Board by the Director of Shipping Control, they cannot see any foundations for the statements that traffic has been diverted from the port of Dublin."

Alderman A. Byrne said that as he stated at the last meeting there was no use in that Board trying to whitewash the Government authorities any longer. The Government should be allowed to make their own case. It was not for the Board to do it for them. He asked if there was any reply to the resolution passed at the last meeting asking for the release of three of G. and J. Burns' ships.

Chairman—The Secretary informs me there is no reply.

Alderman Byrne said those were not isolated cases. He had received a letter from Mr. J. McMorrough, 58 Middle Abbey street, in which he stated:—

"I would like to draw your attention to the manner in which traffic from Manchester to Dublin is conducted. At the present time it has actually taken six weeks for a bale of cotton to come from Manchester to Dublin. Before the war we used to get this in three days. It has actually taken three weeks from Dublin to Cork. Is not this a deplorable state of things?"

Continuing, Alderman Byrne said there were traders in all parts of Dublin who had grievances, but were afraid to complain about the shipping companies. The Board ought to appoint a deputation to interview the proper authorities and demand the release of all ships. Belfast had 99 per cent. of its sailings to the principal ports, but sailings were, he admitted, lost to a number of small places like Ayr and Barrow. He thought Belfast should be complimented on its energy.

The Chairman suggested that the Committee already appointed to deal with this matter should be the deputation.

Mr. Field said it was not so much a question of delay as one of diverted traffic. A certain amount of delay must take place at present owing to the shortage of labour and labour troubles. It was his conviction that for years the Great Northern Railway (Ireland) had adopted a policy of transferring all the traffic they could to Belfast, and he understood the Great Southern and Western Railway were compelled by their agreement with the Great Western Railway to give all the traffic they could to Fishguard. With regard to ships, he understood a certain number had been restored, and he thought Mr. Burgess was inclined to do the best he could. He suggested that this Committee be called into action again, and that they should get to the bottom of the matter.

Mr. Byrne said the railway companies referred to ignored Dublin as much as they could. The reason was obvious; it was to their own benefit.

The matter was referred to the Committee.

LIGHTKEEPERS.

At the request of Alderman Byrne, the Harbour Master was directed to furnish a return showing the conditions of pay of the lightkeepers in the Board's service.

ANNUAL INSPECTION.

Mr. Field handed in notice of motion that the Dublin harbour and the harbours under the control of the Board be visited annually by a committee of the members.

HIBERNIAN NAUTICAL SCHOOL.

NAVAL COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S VISIT.

Admiral Sir Reginald Tupper, Commander-in-Chief, Queenstown, yesterday afternoon visited the Hibernian Nautical School, Clontarf. He was accompanied by Captain M. H. Clarke, O.B.E., R.N.R., Senior Transport Officer, and Captain Webb, Harbour Master, and was met by the Governors of the School. The School was inspected, and the boys drilled in his presence.

In an address Admiral Tupper pointed out to the boys their duty to King and country, and advised them to study the life of that great sailor, Sir Francis Drake, whose energies made England the greatest sea Power in the world. He emphasised his great desire to have British boys for British ships, and said that the boys in that School should have more facilities in practical work. It was not only scholastic work that they needed, but training by putting them afloat in training ships where they would learn their duties as seamen. We were a nation of seamen, and he hoped that the possibilities of training boys for the sea in Ireland would be developed. (Cheers.)

One of the Senior Governors thanked Admiral Tupper for the great honour that he had bestowed upon the School. It was the first occasion upon which a commander-in-chief had visited the School, and it showed the very great interest Admiral Tupper was taking in the welfare of Ireland, and his desire to give every facility to boys to go to sea. (Cheers.)

A memorable visit was brought to a close by the Commander-in-Chief signing the "presence book" prior to his departure.

THE IRISH BUTTER INDUSTRY.

MERCHANTS' AND RETAILERS' COMPLAINT.

PROSECUTIONS AT KINGSTOWN.

Some food prosecution cases before Mr. Lupton, K.C., in the Kingstown Police Court yesterday, raised questions of general interest. A number of shopkeepers were prosecuted for selling butter containing water in excess of the legal quantity.

Denis Byrne, 51 Sandycove road, was summoned for selling butter containing 26 per cent. of water.

Mr. E. J. Kenny, solicitor, prosecuted on behalf of the Kingstown Urban Council. Food Inspector Daly proved the cases.

Mr. J. K. Woods, solicitor, defended.

Mr. Joseph O'Connor (instructed by Messrs. W. G. Bradley and Sons, solicitors) appeared for Messrs. Nolan and Sons and for Messrs. John Leonard and Sons, wholesale butter merchants.

Mr. Kenny said that there were three cases in all, and the defendants relied upon a guarantee given at the time of purchase. The Council wanted to get at the guilty party. Such butter as they were now concerned with at 2s. 7d. a lb. provided a good margin for profit.

Mr. Denis Byrne said that he had paid 2s. 5d. a lb. for it, and sold it as he got it from Messrs. Nolan.

Mr. Kenny said that he did not impute any fraud to Mr. Byrne.

Mr. O'Connor said that the British Government had been buying all the Irish butter that it could get, and very anxious it had been to get it. Creameries were supplying butter with much more than 16 per cent. of water. This was sent to the Government as "best Irish creamery butter." The Government tested it, and instead of prosecuting or sending it back they deducted from the price in accordance with the amount of excessive water. Having been so successful in imposing on the British Government, it was only human to expect they could equally impose on the Irish wholesale butter merchants. There were two bodies who could take the matter up—the Board of Agriculture and the local authority. It was only to be expected that a local authority would not prosecute a local industry, and the Board of Agriculture would do nothing. His clients were powerless, as well as innocent, in the whole matter. They had written to the Board suggesting that the simplest way to deal with it would be to send an inspector to the railway stations to take samples from the boxes as they arrived, but no reply had been received. They also wrote to the Dublin Corporation, but that body was of opinion it could not prosecute until the sale had taken place, and the fact of the article arriving at a railway station did not constitute a sale. The Dublin Wholesale Produce Association, of which his clients were members, was doing all in its power to put an end to this practice. On June 25th the Association wrote to the Board of Agriculture, stating its willingness to co-operate with the Board, and pointing out that under present conditions traders were being victimised, while the manufacturers, who were really the guilty persons, and the only ones to profit by the fraud, escaped scot free. They asked the Board of Agriculture four questions—(a) "If your Department will, if notified by our members of suspected consignments, take samples? (b) If the butter is found to be adulterated, will your Department proceed direct against the manufacturer? (c) If your Department has taken any samples of creamery butter in the course of transit? or (d) If your Department will consider the advisability of so doing?" No reply had been received.

Mr. Woods said that his worship might remember that a short time ago he had a similar case before him. His worship had imposed a fine of 10s. Mr. Woods's client brought the case before the Recorder, and all that he recovered from the creamery which had given the warranty was the bare 10s. and costs.

Mr. Lupton said that he could not be expected to express an opinion as to how other people should do their business.

Mr. Nolan, of Messrs. Nolan and Sons, stated that the butter in question had been purchased from Keating's creamery, Newtownsandes, Co. Kerry. Through Mr. Bradley, their solicitor, his firm had complained to Keating's.

Mr. O'Connor read a letter from Mr. Marshall, solicitor for the creamery, in which it was stated that they repudiated all liability, and pointed out that the butter had been several weeks in Messrs. Nolan's custody, and no complaint had been made during all that time.

Mr. Lupton said that the remedy in all cases of the kind was in the hands of the public. If public bodies, who were supposed to look after these things, did not carry out their duties, the remedy still remained in the hands of the public. A sound public opinion would always succeed in carrying out such reforms. He would have to dismiss the case, but he would say a great injustice was being done to the public.

Mr. O'Connor said that a question had been asked in the House of Commons with reference to Irish butter, where a trader had been fined 30s. for selling butter containing excessive water. The trader had explained that he had been compelled to accept it from the Government. The question was asked why should this trader be fined for selling butter which the Government compelled him to accept.

Mr. Lupton dismissed similar summonses against Michael Cleary, 61 Glasthule, Kingstown, and Katherine Broderick, 67a Lower George's street, Kingstown.

Mr. Leonard, of the wholesale firm of Messrs. Leonard and Sons, Dublin, said that in one case the butter was supplied by Keating's; they were not sure of the other.

Mr. Lupton said that he understood that good butter contained no more than 12 per cent. of water, but the law allowed a margin of 16 per cent. It was shameful that Irishmen in one of their own industries should resort to this practice to make a few pence.

Mr. O'Connor read a further letter from the Wholesale Association to the Board of Agriculture, inquiring from them the legal position of traders in this matter, and the reply of the Department was a suggestion that they should be guided by their legal adviser. (Laughter.)

All the cases were dismissed.

LAW REPORTS.

ACTION AGAINST THE GOVERNORS OF THE ROYAL BELFAST ACADEMICAL INSTITUTION.—In the Chancery Division yesterday, before the Master of the Rolls, the hearing was resumed of the action in which the Attorney-General is the plaintiff at the relation of Mr. Frederick J. Robb and the Belfast Estate Company, and the defendants are the Governors of the Royal Belfast Academical Institution, and Mr. Robert T. Martin, Chairman of the Institution. The plaintiff claims that the defendants acted in breach of their trust in connection with the sale and purchase of a certain profit rent derived from premises in Castle place, Belfast, and the investment of certain funds of the Institution therein, whereby loss was caused to the funds of the Institution. As against defendant, Mr. Martin, a declaration was claimed that he was guilty of fraud in relation to the sale, purchase, and investment whereby such breach of trust was induced and contributed to, and loss occasioned. An inquiry was asked for, and also an order that the defendants, or one of them, make good to the funds of the Institution the amount which may be found to be due by them or either of them. The defendants denied in detail the various alleged causes of action. Mr. Serjeant Sullivan, Mr. James Andrews, K.C., and Mr. H. M. Thompson (instructed by Messrs. Johns, Elliott, and Johns) appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. S. L. Brown, K.C.; Mr. R. F. Harrison, K.C., and Mr. George Brett (instructed by Sir Charles H. Brett) appeared for the Governors of the Institution. Mr. Herbert Wilson, K.C.; Mr. William Jellett, K.C., and Mr. Megaw (instructed by Sir Charles Brett) represented Mr. Robert T. Martin. Mr. Robb, one of the relators, was further cross-examined by Mr. Jellett, K.C., on behalf of Mr. Martin, and said he was not making a direct charge of deliberate breach of trust, but the Governors were induced to make the purchase at an inflated price by Mr. Martin. The case for the plaintiff having closed, Mr. S. L. Brown, K.C., on behalf of the Governors of the Institution, said the action ought never to have been brought, because it was brought, not on behalf of the public, or to protect the charity, but because the relators were prevented by the action of Mr. Martin at the auction from purchasing the rent in question for £3,500. Fraud was charged against Mr. Martin, and yet Mr. Robb had to admit that fraud was charged without any evidence to support it when he launched the action. The Governors accepted entire responsibility for everything Mr. Martin did, and he acted with their authority and in their interests, and informed them as to everything necessary to make known to them. Mr. Martin was the person, naturally, who would act for the Governors in such a matter, and had acted for them in that sort of business all through. When counsel concluded his opening statement, the Master of the Rolls again referred to the question mentioned on the previous day as to the suit being by the Attorney-General at the relation of an estate company, and said he thought it was unprecedented. Mr. S. L. Brown—It is unprecedented. The Master of the Rolls said it might possibly be the Attorney-General was absolutely uncontrolled in the matter. Mr. Brown said he could not conceive that the Attorney-General could have had any conception of the real nature of the action when he gave his fiat.

Evidence was then given by Governors of the institution to the effect that Mr. Martin had general authority to act in the interests of the Governors in regard to the purchase in question. There was no concealment of anything by Mr. Martin, and he had justified the confidence placed in him.

The case for the Governors having closed,

Mr. Jellett, K.C., on behalf of the defendant, Mr. Martin, said that his client had been charged with fraud, but the man responsible for bringing him to the Court said that he had not a scrap of evidence to substantiate the charge. Concealment and misrepresentation were alleged, but those who were supposed to be duped by the machinations of Mr. Martin came in and told the Court that Mr. Martin concealed nothing, and that they knew everything it was essential that they should know. There was no misrepresentation of any kind, and in everything that Mr. Martin did he had the approval and sanction of the Governors of the institution.

Mr. Robert T. Martin, the specially named defendant, was examined, and said that he had acted as Chairman of the institution for seven or eight years, and had assisted it as much as possible. There was no truth in any allegations of fraudulent concealment in the matter. He had on all occasions given the institution every information in his power with regard to the purchase in question.

The further hearing of the action was adjourned till this morning.

AMERICAN ARMY EQUIPMENT.

An Exchange Washington telegram says:—An offer of 300 million dollars for the Army equipment now in France, which originally cost 1,500 millions, has been made by French officials to the War Department. The Director of Sales of Surplus Material, Mr. Hare, left for France on Wednesday night. He said that he thought that, unless a fair price could be paid for the material, it would be returned to the United States.

An Exchange New York telegram says a Washington message states that when shown the reports of Sir Douglas Haig's speech declaring that England had won the war, the Secretary, Mr. Baker, said—"English soldiers were brave beyond praise. American soldiers gave their own demonstration."

DUBLIN CRIMINAL SESSIONS.

The Hon. the Recorder resumed the business of the Dublin City Criminal Sessions in Green street Courthouse yesterday.

LARCENY OF AEROPLANE LINEN.

Patrick Carroll was put forward charged with having stolen 197 yards of aeroplane linen from the bonded stores at St. John's road, and with receiving same unlawfully.

Mr. Wm. Carrigan, K.C., who (instructed by the Chief Crown Solicitor) appeared for the Crown, stated that accused had been a foreman in the bonded stores, where, among the Government property stored, was a quantity of aeroplane linen forwarded from Belfast, where it had been manufactured. In the month of June last a quantity of this linen was missed.

George Barker, employed at a store in Inchicore, deposed to accused making him a present of a few yards of linen. Prisoner asked him where linen could be sold, and witness told him the name of Mrs. Elizabeth Shanks.

Mrs. Shanks, who keeps a lodging house in Townsend street, stated that accused offered, and she purchased from him, a quantity of linen for £6. The police, who had never visited her place before, afterwards came and took away the linen.

Answering Mr. Sealy (instructed by Messrs. G. Byrne and Co.), who appeared for the defence, witness said that she had never seen Carroll before he came to offer her the linen.

Further evidence showed that the linen was manufactured by Messrs. Richardson, Sons, and Oden, Belfast, and bore the Government identification mark, and that the linen was despatched in good order from Belfast to the Dublin stores. It was stated by Mr. Rodgers, of the stores at St. John's road, that accused's audits were always correct, and that he was praised by the late manager as an honest and reliable man.

Mr. Doran, assistant manager, Dublin bonded stores, stated that accused had access to the stores as foreman both during and after hours. In June he found one bale contained six instead of eight pieces of linen. The pieces produced bore the same marks as those missing. The Government valuation of the linen was 2/4 per running yard. Accused had no authority to sell any of the linen.

Detective Sergeant Byrne deposed to the arrest of the accused, who, when cautioned, said he knew nothing about the matter. When identified by Mrs. Shanks accused stated, "I don't think I ever saw the woman before."

For the defence, Mr. Cullen, stock auditor in connection with bonded stores, stated in reply to Mr. Sealy that he always found accused presented his stock in an able manner. He always found him trustworthy.

In reply to Mr. Carrigan, witness stated that it would alter his opinion materially if it were proved that accused sold 100 yards of this linen for £6.

The jury retired, and on their return the Foreman announced that they failed to agree on either counts.

A juror said they did not think that Mrs. Shanks' evidence was corroborated.

The Recorder, in discharging the jury, said that there was plenty of evidence on which the jurors could make up their minds, one way or the other. "It is no credit," added his lordship, "to find a jury of the citizens of Dublin unable to make up their minds on a perfectly plain case. It is really disgraceful."

Thomas Corlett, who was charged with breaking into the stores of Messrs. O'Brien and Co., Henry place and in whose case the jury disagreed, was put back for trial to the October Sessions, and admitted to bail.

Margaret Donnelly, 58 Bolton street, who was found guilty of stealing a sum of money amounting to between £300 and £400 from Miss Magee, of the same address, was sentenced to 12 months' imprisonment in the second division.

ENGLISH SECURITIES OF KING FERDINAND.

At the Law Court, London, yesterday a Commission sat by the King's direction to inquire as to the English securities of King Ferdinand of Bulgaria. The Commission held that the securities were King Ferdinand's property at the outbreak of the war, and declared them forfeited to the Crown.

A Johannesburg telegram, dated Sunday, states:—Mrs. Ponsonby, eldest daughter of Lord Buxton, Governor-General, gave birth to a daughter to-day. Both mother and daughter are doing well.

A
Government Concession
Officers still serving
may invest their gratuities in Victory Loan NOW
It has been decided that the gratuities to which regular and temporary officers of the Army and Air Force at present serving will become eligible, may now be invested in either Victory Bonds or Funding Loan.
Officers who have not already made arrangements with their agents or bankers to take up War Loan in anticipation of the receipt of their gratuities and who wish to take advantage of this concession should immediately inform (by telegram if necessary) their Army and Air Force agents stating the precise sum they wish invested. Applications must be received on or before the 12th July, the day the Loan closes, and must clearly state that the investment is to be made from the officer's gratuity, and that the amount required is in addition to any sum for which he may already have applied. The securities will be handed over to the agents on the officer's behalf for issue with any balance of gratuity. Gratuity so invested will bear interest as from 4th August, 1919. Income Tax will not be deducted at the source.

The Irish Times.

FRIDAY, JULY 11, 1919.

The Ways and Communications Bill passed the third reading in the House of Commons yesterday. Sir Eric Geddes, the Minister-Designate, made a statement as to the intentions of the new Ministry.

In a division on a new clause of the Aliens Restriction Bill, proposed at the meeting of the Standing Committee yesterday by Sir Ernest Wild, the clause was carried by 15 votes to 12. Sir Hamar Greenwood, on behalf of the Government, said that he had opposed the new clause strenuously and officially, and that he would hold out no hope that the Government would adopt it.

When questioned in the House of Commons yesterday as to the high prices of food and clothing, Mr. Bonar Law stated that the Cabinet was formulating proposals, and hoped to be able to announce them shortly.

Mr. Bonar Law stated in the House of Commons yesterday that he was unable to make a statement on the Government's Irish policy, and could not say whether an announcement on the subject would be made before the recess.

The National Assembly of the Church of England Powers Bill passed through Committee in the House of Lords yesterday, and was reported as amended.

It is announced to-day that on Saturday, 19th inst., there will be a great Victory March of all the troops in the garrison through the streets of Dublin.

Visiting the Hibernian Nautical School yesterday, Admiral Sir R. Tupper, Naval Commander-in-Chief, Queenstown, expressed the hope of seeing the development of facilities for training boys in Ireland for the sea.

Considerable anxiety was expressed in Dublin yesterday by employers, representatives of labour and of the Municipal electricity undertaking with regard to the probable effect of the Government announcement of an increase of 6s. per ton in the price of coal.

The Dublin County Council yesterday adopted a resolution viewing with alarm the absorption of Irish shipping companies by British syndicates, and expressing surprise that the Irish railway companies took no action to safeguard transport facilities.

The strike of farm labourers in Celbridge has extended, and the entire County of Kildare is now involved in the dispute. Owing to agricultural labour trouble in South Meath, cattle which were being sent to Dublin on Wednesday were turned back by the strikers. Shopkeepers have been compelled to refuse food supplies to farmers who decline to concede the demands of the men.

In London yesterday the Stock Markets were irregular. The rise in coal prices had a chilling effect on Home Rails and Industrials, and the rush to invest in the Victory Loans retarded business. Money was again in liberal supply, and was advanced at 2½-¾ per cent., with balances offering at less than 2½ per cent. Discount rates were steadier on the approaching close of the Victory Loan lists. In Dublin Imperial Tobacco, Coats, and Dunlop Rubbers were higher, and City of Dublin Steam lower. Generally the tone was irregular.

The Will to Work.

The German National Assembly has ratified the Peace Treaty. German statesmen were anxious to make a favourable impression upon their late enemies by bowing to the inevitable with a good grace; but they were still more anxious to secure the raising of the blockade. Germany wants to settle down to work. She has had her war and lost it. She has sought salvation in the abandon of a social upheaval, but during the past few months the consciousness of her people has been awakening gradually to the great truth that nothing but work can save them from destruction. The Germans are a dogged race. Whether their energies are concentrated upon a campaign of "frightfulness," the propagation of a kultur, or the development of a new industry, they strain every sinew of their national body to achieve success. Dire necessity is the great impulse which is urging Germany towards her factories and workshops, and all the portents suggest that she is about to make a supreme effort to reinstate herself as an industrial equal among the nations of the world. The task with which she is faced is colossal. She has, in addition to her other financial liabilities, a floating debt of nominally £3,600,000,000. Although her factories are intact and ready to begin work at a moment's notice, the blockade has checked the supply of raw materials. Herr Erzberger proposes to deal with the floating debt by confiscation of war profits, or possibly by a large levy on capital. The blockade is about to be raised; and American enterprise will lose no time in re-victualling the people and replenishing their wardrobes. Thus, in a very short time, we must be prepared for a great industrial revival in Germany. For some years, it is true, her output will be absorbed by her external obligations; but success cannot long be denied to a nation at work, and it would be folly to imagine that German industrial competition is a thing of the past.

The bitter waters of humiliation have acted as a tonic to Germany's economic system, while the sweets of victory seem to have intoxicated the working classes in France, in Italy, and even in Great Britain, and made them forgetful of the hour's great need. The working men in Great Britain are clamouring for State control, about which they know very little. Germany, who also has had her "Sankey Commission"—and, moreover, has many years' experience of nationalisation—has rejected the scheme as obstructive of industrial progress. The German workman has had his fill of Bolshevism; he knows the horrors of anarchy and the pangs of starvation. The British workman, on the other hand, is still playing with the fire which has scorched his German rival. To put the matter in a few words, Germany's people have received a rough, but thorough, lesson in the fundamental facts of political economy—a thing of which our own workers do not seem, even yet, to have mastered the alphabet. America's production is increasing by leaps and bounds while ours remains at a stand-still. American industry will be our most unrelenting competitor in the race to capture the markets of the world. The whole economic and industrial balance of the globe is in process of readjustment. New York will usurp London's proud place as the world's clearing house; America's merchant fleet will monopolise the carrying trade of the Pacific; the factories of the United States will swamp the European markets with every sort of commodity—all these things must inevitably happen unless the working classes in these islands come to their senses.

President Wilson, in a conference with newspaper correspondents, held before his speech in the American Senate, expressed his gratification at the fact that Germany had ratified the Peace Treaty. He also said that the Associated Powers should resume trade with Germany as quickly as possible, in order to re-establish her financial equilibrium. There is no doubt that a boycott of German goods—even were it desirable—is impossible. Obviously, America intends to trade with the new Republic, and it is very necessary that Great Britain shall not allow her Transatlantic competitors to capture the German market. From Germany it is but a step to Russia, and, as soon as American goods establish themselves in Central Europe, British manufacturers will lose some of their best customers. Yet at this most critical moment British production is steadily decreasing. In the struggle for the shadow of higher wages we stand in grave danger of losing the bone of national prosperity. Soon American ships will be discharging cargoes of woollens and textiles at the Baltic ports. They will return to the States laden with potash, with chemicals, and a hundred other products of German industry, while the mills of Manchester and Yorkshire will be forced to stand idle, because the price of coal prohibits competition. In spite of the obvious will of Germany to work, it is true that she can hardly be regarded as a dangerous commercial rival for many years to come; but let us have no illusions about America. Unless our workers begin to realise the true position of affairs, and settle down to a period of intensive production, Great Britain's industrial and commercial supremacy will yield its pride of place. British brains and British muscles have no superiors, but even they will be of little avail if the will to work is dead.

The Transport Bill.

The Transport Bill's passage through the House of Commons concluded last night, when it received a third reading. Sir R. Cooper and General Page Croft, who from the outset resolutely refused to admit that there was any need for the Bill, or that it could serve a useful purpose, made a final effort to secure its rejection. They challenged a division, and the result was that not a single member could be found to vote against it. The figures—245 to 0—are significant. They show that, whatever differences of opinion there may be concerning matters of detail, none exists on the question of principle. The House of Commons realises that steps must be taken to improve the national transport, and that a drastic system of centralisation, such as the Bill proposes, has become an urgent necessity. As Sir Eric Geddes said, it is the alternative to nationalisation and its attendant evils. Sir Eric dealt with criticisms of the estimated deficit on the working of the railways during the current financial year. His latest estimate is much more cheerful than that which he gave six months ago. In January he predicted that the taxpayers would be called upon to pay a sum of about £109,000,000. Now he believes that, in consequence of certain economies, the amount will not exceed £65,000,000. It is to be hoped that this expectation will be fulfilled. Sir Eric Geddes gave an outline of his programme for the next two years. He proposes to eliminate competitive railway services and to enforce the common use of rolling stock. By these means he hopes to increase the carrying capacity of the various lines. Undoubtedly, the proposal regarding rolling stock will effect economy, but it is doubtful whether the abolition of competition will be to the public advantage. Next he contemplates the "judicious electrification" of certain lines so as to reduce the cost of traction. He will also take steps to develop coastal traffic, which at present is "practically dead" owing to the competition of subsidised railways. As regards docks—concerning which his powers have been, to some extent, limited—he proposes to invite the controlling authorities to confer with the railway managers with a view to securing closer co-operation. Energetic measures will be taken to improve inland water transport on "a definitely thought out system," and the development of roads will be undertaken without delay. Sir Eric does not intend to concentrate the management of all transport undertakings at Whitehall at once, but the special branch which will have charge of roads will be established immediately. He informed the House that he has made all arrangements for the establishment of the different departments of the Ministry, and that appointments will be made so soon as the Bill receives the Royal assent.

Thank the Force.

The second list of subscriptions to the Royal Irish Constabulary Benevolent Fund is published to-day. Its substantial total will hearten Sir Hutcheson Poe in his good work, and will be a real encouragement to all the members of the Force. The organisers of sedition and outrage realise that the Constabulary is the main-stay of law and order in Ireland. They are sticking at no effort to daunt its courage and impair its magnificent devotion. The assassin's revolver, savage assaults by organised gangs, and—perhaps, the most cruel weapon of all—the social boycott are being employed in this infamous campaign against fellow-Irishmen. In large areas of the South and West the policeman does his duty at constant risk of his life. Hardly a day passes in which our columns do not report some murderous attack on single constables or on small patrols. Nevertheless, the Force remains firmly true to its high traditions, meets every new danger with unshaken courage, and accepts every new responsibility with alert and cheerful loyalty. Decent Irishmen never had better cause for pride and confidence in the Royal Irish Constabulary than now, when, under the command of that brave soldier and wise and sympathetic administrator, Sir Joseph Byrne, it is not merely supporting, but enhancing, its inherited fame. Sir Hutcheson Poe's Fund will serve a double purpose. It will supplement the State's provision for members of the Force who have become, or may become, martyrs to duty, and for their dependents. It will assure the police of the admiration and gratitude of large numbers of their fellow-countrymen. That assurance will be peculiarly welcome and helpful to the Force at the present time. We hope, therefore, that law-abiding Irishmen and Irishwomen throughout the country will combine to make the Fund a distinguished success.

A "Dry" Ireland?

The Prohibition Party in the United States, having made that country "bone dry," proposes to repeat its triumph on this side of the Atlantic. The Anti-Saloon League has taken offices in London, and is making plans for a tremendous attack on the drink habit in the United Kingdom. Its advance-agent is Mr. William Johnson, who is reputed to have done more to make the United States "dry" than any other man. He is known in his own place as "Pussyfoot" Johnson by reason of his noiseless ways of circumventing opposition. He is America's champion "butter in," and he has reduced the process from a rough-and-tumble to a fine art. The League is prepared for an unlimited expenditure on its campaign in these islands. It will "butt in" at elections, and will "get behind" organisations. It will advertise largely in the Press, and may even buy a newspaper or two. It will convince employers that they can get greater profits from "dry" than from "wet" workers. It will arrange for the propagation of its doctrines—disguised as "ordinary strong drama"—by the cinematograph companies. Our own view is that—apart from the merits of the controversy—the Anti-Saloon League's methods will not appeal to Englishmen, Scotsmen, or Irishmen. These ancient peoples are not easily "rushed" into changes of habit, and are apt to resent external dictation, whether in matters of politics or of morals. We fancy that the British working man will have a word to say to Mr. "Pussyfoot" Johnson.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S VISIT TO CANADA.

Reuter's Agency learns that the ship that will take the Prince of Wales to Canada will probably be H.M.S. Renown, which will be escorted by two cruisers.

THE R.I.C. BENEVOLENT FUND.

Letter from Sir Hutcheson Poe.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In sending you the second list of subscriptions to the Royal Irish Constabulary Benevolent Fund for publication in your advertising columns, may I express the hope that the munificent donation with which Lady Ardilaun heads the list may be the means of stimulating public interest and sympathy with the Fund, and that many who as yet have not subscribed to it will no longer hesitate to do so?

The necessity for the Fund is, unhappily, being daily emphasised by the cowardly and savage attacks that are reported from every part of the country, which indicate how widespread is the movement against law and order, and how formidable the conspiracy of intimidation and violence which is being directed against the Constabulary.

In such circumstances, if these outrages are as abhorrent to the great mass of the Irish people as I believe them to be, it is the duty of every law-abiding man and woman in the country to unite in condemnation of them, and to testify their sympathy with the sorely-tried officers and men of the Constabulary by subscribing to the Fund which is being raised on their behalf.—Yours, etc.,

HUTCHESON POE, Lt.-Colonel,
Hon. Secretary, R.I.C. Benevolent Fund.
Heywood, Ballinakill, Queen's County,

OUTRAGE IN COUNTY CLARE.

TWO POLICEMEN FIRED AT.

A report was received in Kilrush yesterday that Constable Mannion and Constable Creaghan, R.I.C., who were on patrol duty, were fired at on Wednesday night at Dangaelly, near Cooraclare, about five or six miles from Kilrush. Three shots were fired at them, but the constables were uninjured. A tree near by bears traces of the shots. District Inspector Barrett is investigating the outrage. Threatening notices were posted in the district lately in connection with the entertaining of the military. No arrests have been made. This is the first outrage of its kind in West Clare. There is some excitement in the district.

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
THURSDAY NIGHT.

Mr. Denis Henry was cheered in the House of Commons to-day on making his first appearance as Attorney-General for Ireland. He stated that the promised Bill to improve the conditions of Irish teachers would be introduced shortly, but could not give the exact date.

Mr. Denis Henry, K.C., formerly Solicitor-General for Ireland, will be sworn in as Attorney-General in Dublin on Saturday, and Mr. D. M. Wilson, K.C., M.P., who has succeeded him in the Solicitor-Generalship, will be sworn in at the same time.

Mr. Bonar Law was asked whether the Government proposed to give effect to the resolution passed by the House on June 4th and appoint a Parliamentary body to report upon a measure of Federal Devolution. He replied in the affirmative. It is rumoured that a plan for dealing with the Irish side of the problem is already in process of construction.

On the third reading of the Transport Bill, Sir Eric Geddes made a general statement on the policy that he proposed to pursue. On this occasion he dispensed with his usual typescript, and spoke from notes only, and, as he is thoroughly au fait with his subject, he easily kept the attention of the House. He made it plain that, despite the Advisory Committees with which the House had provided him, he meant to be master in his own house, and outlined a far-reaching scheme of reform, particularly for railways.

To some extent he modified his original statement that the working of the railways under present conditions would cost the taxpayer 100 millions a year. The net cost would be about 60 millions, or 65, if the increased price of coal was allowed for. A rise in railway rates was inevitable. In America they had been put up by 25 per cent., and, in spite of that, there was an estimated deficit of 150 millions. But the future of the country was even more bound up with roads. They were, in some respects, the best in the world, but in order to carry heavy traffic they needed strengthening and widening. Mr. Joynson-Hicks and his friends were much pleased with this avowal.

A curious record was set up at Bisley to-day by a veteran belonging to the National Reserve. The ammunition used this year is largely experimental, it should be observed. This gentleman, according to the Evening News, fired 50 shots yesterday and scored one magpie. This morning in the Albert he had a further 15, and never hit the target at all. Total—3 points in 55 shots.

An emergency Sub-Committee of the Parliamentary coal group met to-day to consider the situation created by the Government's announcement of an addition of 6s. per ton to the price of coal. Amongst those present were General Hickman, Mr. Leslie Scott, K.C.; Brigadier-General Surtees, Colonel Gretton, Major Christopher Lowther, Mr. Gresham Stewart, Mr. Percy Hurd, the Hon. H. D. McLaren, and Captain Stanley Wilson. It was at once agreed that the Government had no course open to them other than that of charging the increased cost to the consumer, since to place it on the shoulders of the general taxpayer would be both unjust and uneconomic. The Sub-Committee felt, however, that the Government must be called upon to give the clearest possible analysis of the facts upon which they have based their decision, and that the promised White Paper on the subject should be issued at once so as to give ample time for its study before the opening of Monday's debate.

The increase in the price of coal has brought about a feeling of absolute consternation in the country among all who are capable of realising what it means. Even the miners' representatives, in spite of their foolish talk about the miners being sacrificed to maintain our export trade, realise that the miners will be among the first to suffer if that trade is ruined. If the export trade is ruined, food will rise in price, and wages will fall because of unemployment. Less wages will mean a falling off in the demand for everything, and a fall in the demand will lead to a much smaller consumption of coal. How can we regain our export trade in coal once we have lost it? Rivals are growing up daily to seize it, and, once they secure it, they will keep it.

The coal debate in the House of Commons on Monday will be one of the most important since the opening of the war, and it is to be hoped that the public will have a full opportunity of making a study of it. The Government situation will certainly be placed in the fullest possible light, and the miners, no doubt, will see that their case is put forward as clearly as possible. So much depends upon this coal situation that it is not too much to say that the whole future of the Empire is concerned.

The Miners' Federation will meet at Keswick on the day when the increased charge for coal comes into force, and it is generally known that the extremists will try to rush the Federation into demanding the nationalisation of all coal mines. Possibly there may be a ballot of all the miners as a preliminary to a strike, but that is not at all certain. In many quarters there is an idea that the country will be faced with a grave issue early in August.

London is gradually getting ready for Peace Day. Flags are appearing in all directions. Even the Government offices have gone to the expense of procuring new flag-masts and flags for the occasion. Several big shops and stores in the West End are preparing ambitious schemes of decoration, but it seems unlikely that such a step will be general, for the price of bunting is prohibitive. It seems certain that the poorer classes will not be able to do much, for a cotton Union Jack of any size costs six or seven shillings.

The Government is preparing a programme for use in London on July 19th, which will contain full details of the great procession, with a list of the units marching, and the officers in command. It will also give a list of the bands and where they will play, while a section will be devoted to the great firework display in Hyde Park at night. The programme is to be sold, so that it will probably cost the State nothing.

Mr. Churchill is about to pay a visit to the Prime Minister at Criccieth in order that they may discuss many matters of importance. It is said that Mr. Churchill is determined that there shall be no delay in putting into operation several schemes in order that the Army may be placed on a peace footing, and peace expenditure, at the earliest moment.

The R 34 has started on her homeward voyage, and, with favourable weather, may cross the Atlantic in some eighty hours. The Marconi Company have erected a huge board outside their building in the Strand to show the course of the flight, but the path marked out is the direct one to England, and not that via the Azores.

The City of London is to honour Marshal Foch by presenting him with a sword of honour. The date for the ceremony has not yet been fixed.

The memorial to the Prime Minister, organised by the coal group among members of Parliament on the subject of nationalisation, has now been forwarded to the right hon. gentleman. It bears nearly 300 signatures, and, while drawing attention to the serious manner in which our vital industrial interests may be affected by the recommendations in Mr. Justice Sankey's recent report, urges that no action should be taken in this matter without a most careful and methodical weighing of all the considerations bearing on the subject. The right hon. gentleman is being asked to receive a deputation in support of the memorial.

PEACE CELEBRATIONS.

THE DUBLIN ARRANGEMENTS.

GREAT MILITARY PROCESSION.

Elaborate preparations for the celebration of peace in Dublin on Saturday, 19th inst., are being made by the Dublin District Headquarters. In the morning there will be an imposing military procession through the streets, in which all the troops of the Dublin Garrison and detachments of the Royal Air Force will take part. In the procession will also be representatives of the Officers' Training Corps and 1st Cadet Battalion Royal Dublin Fusiliers, while a feature will be the muster of demobilised sailors and soldiers, the remainder of those gallant men who gave their services freely and voluntarily, and who have now returned to civil occupations. The demobilised soldiers will, as far as possible, be grouped according to the regiments in which they served.

It is intended that the saluting base shall be near the Bank of Ireland, in College Green, where the salute will be taken by His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant at about 12 noon.

Massed bands from infantry units are being arranged, and everything is being done to ensure the success of the celebrations. The desire is expressed that the civil population should by a generous exhibition of flags, bunting, and other patriotic emblems show their gratitude for victory. Further particulars as to the route of the Victory March, etc., will be given later.

DUBLIN'S VICTORY MARCH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Having learned through the Press that peace and victory are to be celebrated on the 19th inst. with a march through the city of the troops and several O.T.C.'s, I am rather surprised that, so far, there has been no mention of allowing the St. John Ambulance and Red Cross V.A.D.'s and workers to have a place in this Victory March. It would be superfluous for me to point out the magnificent work that has been done during the late war by these bodies; and, although not a member of either, I feel that they should have a look in in the Victory March.—Yours, etc.,

"TRUE BLUE."

Dublin, July 10th, 1919.

HOLIDAY FOR GOVERNMENT EMPLOYES.

Mr. Bonar Law informed Lieut.-Col. A. Murray in the House of Commons yesterday that the Government had decided to grant a general holiday to all Government employés on 19th inst.

Mr. Bonar Law also informed Sir F. Hall that he understood that arrangements were being made whereby leave would be granted on the official Peace Day, July 19th, to men of the Fighting Forces on as extensive a scale as possible.

FIREWORKS IN HYDE PARK.

Lieut.-Col. Spender Clay asked the Prime Minister whether £20,000 was to be spent on a display of fireworks in Hyde Park during the peace celebrations on July 19th.

Mr. Bonar Law said that the sum mentioned by the hon. member was greatly in excess of the sum actually sanctioned. In determining the amount to be expended he could assure the House that the Government had given the closest attention to the avoidance of extravagance, and all appearance of extravagance, and of confining expenditure within a strictly limited amount; but they felt, however, that the celebration in the centre of the Empire of, perhaps, the greatest event in history should be suitable to the occasion. (Cheers.)

THE FRENCH FLAG.

Sir A. Mond informed Sir H. Brittain that the King had commanded that the flag of France should be flown on the offices of the Government departments on July 19th.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND POWERS BILL.

COMMITTEE STAGE PASSED.

The LORD CHANCELLOR took his seat on the Woolsack in the House of Lords at 4.15 yesterday.

The House went into Committee on the National Assembly of the Church of England Powers Bill.

The Archbishop of Canterbury said that, although there were 21 pages of amendments, he was glad that none of them appeared to be timed at wrecking the bill, though there were some that could not be accepted.

Viscount Haldane observed that if the promoters meant him, on certain fundamental points he and his friends would not further oppose the measure. His objection to the bill was based on constitutional grounds.

The Lord Chancellor said that if the bill was to bear any fruit elsewhere it must leave that House in a form which satisfied its promoters. If it left the House in a shape in which it no longer commanded the support of the very earnest men who drafted it, then it would have no value to the Government or to the House of Commons, and it would be no use wasting further time on it. Therefore, he did not propose to vote for any amendment which was resisted by the promoters. After the bill left that House the Government would examine it, and see whether it was such a bill as they could find facilities for in another place.

Clause 1 having been postponed,

Viscount Haldane moved the omission of Clause 2, which sets up a special Ecclesiastical Committee of the Privy Council for the purpose of considering proposals submitted by the Legislative Committee of the Church Assembly. He regarded the clause as an unconstitutional outrage.

The amendment, after a debate, was defeated by 78 to 17.

Viscount Haldane moved two other amendments, but they were negatived.

Lord Willoughby de Broke moved an amendment providing that no measure shall be submitted to the Ecclesiastical Committee which would make any alterations in the Book of Common Prayer.

The Archbishop of Canterbury said that the Book of Common Prayer could not be altered without the consent of Parliament.

The amendment was withdrawn.

Viscount Finlay proposed an amendment providing that, after considering a measure submitted by the Legislative Committee of the Church Assembly, the Ecclesiastical Committee shall draft a report thereon, stating the nature and legal effect of the measure, and their views as to expediency, especially with relation to the constituted national rights of all His Majesty's subjects.

The Archbishop of Canterbury accepted the amendment.

Viscount Haldane said that the words were not sufficient to prevent the Constitution being violated.

The amendment was agreed to.

On Clause 4, Viscount Finlay moved an amendment, the object of which was to ensure that no measure reported on by the Ecclesiastical Committee should go forward or become law except by the sanction of both Houses of Parliament.

The Archbishop of Canterbury accepted the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill passed through Committee, and was reported as amended.

The House rose at 7.15.

CIVIL SERVICE ESTIMATES.

RAILWAYS, POLICE, AND PRISONS.

The Standing Committee of the House of Commons dealing with the Estimates for the Civil Services met again yesterday. On the adjourned question of voting £30,000,000 to meet the expenditure arising from the Government control of railways in Great Britain and Ireland,

Major Barnes again drew attention to a suggestion that £40,000,000 might have to be paid for wear and tear. It was a claim which, he understood, had not yet been presented, and he could not understand why the principle of it had been admitted by the auditors.

Mr. Bridgeman (Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade), in reply, said that it was not fair to contend that the railways had no claim whatever to wear and tear. There was a very heavy amount of traffic during the war, and the Treasury gave the railway companies the assurance that they would have a claim against the Government at the end of the war in regard to arrears of maintenance.

The vote was passed.

On a vote of £1,183,357 for the Metropolitan Police, Sir Hamar Greenwood said that he could hold out no hope of any decrease in the estimates on this head in the future, but, owing to the increase in pay and pensions of the police, there would certainly be a greater increase.

On the vote for a sum to maintain the prisons of the country,

Sir Hamar Greenwood said that there had been a great decrease during the last few years in the number of prisoners. But they had estimated for the coming year for a great increase, and they did so because they had a precedent to follow after the Boer War. The increase in the estimates was very largely due to the increase of pay and pensions to the present officials.

THE COST OF LIVING.

PARLIAMENT AND "PROFITEERING."

CABINET FORMULATING PROPOSALS.

Sir J. Butcher asked the Prime Minister, in the House of Commons yesterday, whether, in view of the abnormally high prices of woollen cloths and garments, he would order a searching inquiry to be made into the cost incurred and the prices paid at every stage of the production and distribution of these articles, beginning with the raw materials and ending with the finished article as sold to the consumer in order to ascertain what profits were made by the various persons through whose hands these articles passed on their way to the consumer.

Mr. Bridgeman—The Government have the high prices of clothing under consideration, but I am not yet in a position to make a statement.

Sir J. Butcher—In view of the high prices of clothes, coal, food, and other commodities, will the right hon. gentleman consider the advisability of constituting an inquiry with regard to all these with a view to stopping "profiteering" and bringing down prices?

Mr. Bridgeman said that that was a question for the Government.

Sir J. Butcher—May I ask the leader of the House as to how these high prices of all these commodities came about?

Mr. Bonar Law—This is a subject which has been engaging the attention of the Government and the Cabinet very frequently. It is not an easy one to deal with. We are formulating proposals, and hope to be able to announce them shortly.

Mr. Higham—Will the leader of the House give a day for debate on the subject?

Mr. Bonar Law—I have no objection, but I doubt very much whether it will help at present. If we can formulate a scheme we shall then have before the House the information desired.

"PROFITEERING" BY RETAIL TRADERS.

The Home Secretary, replying to Mr. Higham, said that "profiteering" by retail traders was already an offence punishable with imprisonment without the option of a fine. The Ministry of Food had informed him that 31 such sentences were imposed last year.

Mr. John Jones—In view of what is happening in Italy, is it intended to take steps to prevent similar things in this country?

No reply was given.

FOOD PRICES.

THE QUESTION OF "PROFITEERING."

The serious increase in household maintenance threatened by the proposed addition of 6s. per ton in the already almost prohibitive price of coal has helped to concentrate public attention on the food question, and the signs afforded by the last few days have shown that "profiteering" has not reached its extreme limit. In Dublin, and indeed all over the country, there has been a general outcry against the tendency still further to advance prices, particularly in the case of such classes of provisions as are now on the market in large quantities, and whose supply is considerably in excess of the actual demand. Bacon is a commodity which may be taken as an example to prove that at present a factor other than the consumer is responsible for its high cost. At present the price of the best quality of Irish bacon is 1s. 8d. per lb., with a prospect of its going still higher before the end of August. During the war, when it went to 2s. 4d. per lb., consumers were given an explanation that the market supplies were inadequate to the demand, most of which meant the fulfilling of contracts with the Government for the supply of the troops in France and other war areas. To-day that plea can no longer be entertained, while furthermore there is the fact that large consignments of Canadian produce are arriving for the home market. The retail prices of butter are further evidence that "profiteering" methods are strongly operative, and that effective measures are essential to counteract them. There is an abundance of supplies on the market, yet the present price of 2s. 8d. per lb. shows no sign of falling. In pre-war days the best quality of home-made butter was never more than 1s. 2d. per lb. Other commodities such as cheese and eggs, at their present inflated prices, are beyond the purchasing power of most persons. To everybody it is a mystery, save for the "ring" of traders concerned, how beef and mutton continue to remain at prices in some cases higher than were charged during the war, despite the fact that there have been several substantial falls in the market price of cattle since Easter.

GOVERNMENT'S IRISH POLICY.

MR. BONAR LAW UNABLE TO MAKE A STATEMENT.

In the House of Commons yesterday,

Lieutenant-Colonel Aubrey Herbert asked the Prime Minister if he would say when he proposed to make a statement with regard to the Government's future Irish policy.

Mr. Bonar Law—I am sorry that it is not possible for me to name a date.

Lord H. Cavendish Bentinck—When will the Prime Minister and his Liberal colleagues begin to apply their Liberal principles to the Government of Ireland? (Opposition cheers.)

Mr. Bonar Law—I do not recognise any distinction as between the Liberal views of one set of colleagues and another. (Cheers.)

Lieutenant-Colonel Murray asked could the right hon. gentleman say would there be a statement before the recess.

Mr. Bonar Law—No sir, I cannot.

FEDERAL DEVOLUTION.

Lt.-Col. Murray MacDonald asked the Prime Minister whether the Government proposed to give effect to the resolution passed by the House on June 4th to appoint a Parliamentary body to consider and report upon a measure of Federal Devolution.

Mr. Bonar Law—The answer is in the affirmative.

ALIENS BILL IN COMMITTEE.

ANOTHER GOVERNMENT DEFEAT.

RESTRICTIONS OF FOREIGN LABOUR.

The consideration of the Aliens Restriction Bill was resumed yesterday morning by the Standing Committee of the House of Commons, presided over by Mr. Nicholson. On the previous day a new clause, proposed by Sir Ernest Wild and others, restricting the amount of alien labour anyone could employ to ten per cent., was discussed, and eventually adjourned in order that extracts from treaties with other countries bearing on this subject might be produced.

These extracts were circulated among the Committee yesterday, and the discussion on the clause was resumed by Sir Herbert Nield. He said that, while he was not wedded to the restriction of the amount of alien labour that any employer might employ to ten per cent. of the whole of his employés, yet he thought that that would be a reasonable proportion.

Mr. Inskip, in the subsequent discussion, ridiculed the proposed ten per cent., and the new clause generally, and asked how it was going to insure work for the British unemployed. In many cases employers could not employ ten per cent. British labour.

Other speakers pointed out that there was always some amount of unemployment, and that if there was to be unemployment it ought to be amongst aliens.

Sir Hamar Greenwood, for the Government, said that it would be a serious thing in the passage of this bill to include anything at this moment, when there was so much restiveness everywhere, which would give offence either to our Allies or to neutrals. By this clause, if passed, they would break existing contracts by which they permitted subjects of other countries to reside in any part of the country they pleased, and to carry on their business. Instead, they would say: "You can reside here, but you must not work here; you can either starve or go upon the rates." He pointed out that they had more British subjects abroad than there were in this country from all other countries in the world. The total number of aliens of all kinds here did not exceed 300,000, while there were probably millions of good Britons in America alone. The passing of this clause would certainly provoke reprisals, and would put our millions of British subjects in other lands in a difficult position. He hoped the Committee would not pass this clause.

A division was challenged, and resulted in the defeat of the Government, those in favour of the clause being 15, those against 12.

On the motion of Sir Herbert Nield the following words were inserted: "Subject and without prejudice to any treaty obligations." The Committee continued a listless discussion on trivial amendments to the new clause for some time until Sir Courtenay Warner pointed out that the difficulties they were experiencing with regard to these amendments showed how remarkable the clause was as it stood, and he thought, in consequence, that it was very probable that it would be thrown out when it came before the House again. The experience showed that it was now recognised that there was very great difficulty in the clause.

On the motion for the adjournment,

Sir Hamar Greenwood said that he had opposed the new clause strenuously and officially. He would hold out no hope that the Government would adopt it. He regretted that the clause had been passed. He personally would have no further part in the proceedings, as he was transferred elsewhere.

The Committee adjourned till Tuesday.

FROM "THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.)

THE PEACE AND THE WORK OF PEACE.

President Ebert and the German National Assembly have ratified the Peace, which, however, will not be formally complete until the Allies and Associates have ratified it too, observes The Times. Even then, as President Wilson reminded his hearers in his first speech on American soil after his return, the work of peace will have only begun. The attitude of German statesmen, of the Weimar Assembly, and of the German Press plainly suggests that Germany will do nothing to make this work easy. We wish for the best, and we shall continue to hope for it, but our hope cannot ripen into an assurance, or even into confidence, until Germany has proved by a prolonged period of straightforward and honest policy, that she has renounced from her heart her shameful and immoral doctrine that treaties are mere scraps of paper.

COAL INCREASE EXPLAINED.

The Times Parliamentary Correspondent gives a forecast of the White Paper to be published explaining the increase of 6s. per ton in the price of coal. It will, he says, contain the series of statistical tables which the Coal Controller, Sir Evan Jones, submitted to the Coal Commission on June 4, together with corrections bringing the calculations up to date. The estimate officially made at the beginning of June was that the deficiency on the working of the coal industry, on the basis of the estimated output for the next twelve months, after providing for guaranteed profits to owners at the rate of 1s. 2d. a ton, would be about £46,690,000, equal to 4s. 3d. a ton of output. It will be found that the estimated deficiency on the working of the mines, if the present price of coal to consumers is maintained unaltered, will be round about 5s. 9½d. a ton. The Government have fixed the round figure of 6s. a ton in order to provide a small margin. This is not all. The figure of 6s. a ton is the increased charge at the pit-head to begin with. The retail price of coal will be uniformly increased by 6s. a ton all over the country. This uniformity, however, will not last long. Sir Eric Geddes, in his speech on the Transport Bill yesterday, foreshadowed an early increase in carriage rates, and coal consumers in London and other areas remote from the coalfields will then have to bear still higher burdens. It will be explained in the White Paper that the Government have based their calculations on the Sankey recommendation that the profits of coal owners should be limited to 1s. 2d. a ton. Legislation will be needed to make this recommendation effective. A bill has actually been drafted, and it will be introduced into the House of Commons as soon as the Government have defined their attitude to the recommendations of the final report of the Coal Commission.

THE CENTRAL GOVERNING FACT.

The central governing fact, remarks The Times Labour Correspondent, is that, while more men are employed in mining than a year ago, and while each of them is receiving substantially larger wages than a year ago, the output of coal is dwindling to danger point.

HOLLAND AND THE EX-KAISER.

The Times Political Correspondent in Paris states that a reply has been received to the Note sent by the Council of Four to the Dutch Government, calling attention to the necessity for close supervision of the ex-Kaiser and the ex-Crown Prince. The Note was sent just after the Kaiser was wrongly reported to have escaped. The Dutch reply is couched in terms which are considered in Conference circles to be unnecessarily curt. It is to the effect that Holland intends to fulfil all her international obligations, of the scope of which she is fully aware, and she requests the fullest liberty of exercising her sovereign rights as she sees fit.

THE TRANSPORT BILL PASSES.

The Transport Bill passed its third reading in the House of Commons yesterday, remarks The Times, after a division which surely marks, in quite another sense, the passing of the "National Party." When a party numbers only a couple of tellers it cannot expect to be taken very seriously. The principal feature of the debate was a long explanatory speech from Sir Eric Geddes, which may seem reasonable, and even, to some extent, convincing, until it is subjected to critical analysis. It is obvious that Sir Eric Geddes realises that he is in an awkward place, because he took the unusual course of endeavouring to answer the objections which he fears will be raised in the House of Lords.

AMERICA'S FAREWELL TO THE R 34.

Describing the scene at the departure of R 34 from Long Island, The Times Special Correspondent cables:—In some respects the atmosphere of the R 34's departure much resembled that of the departure of an ocean liner. All around were naval uniforms: the hissing of gas rushing from cylinders into hose pipes was an exact imitation of escaping steam, and the picture was completed by the engineers in their shirt-sleeves leaning out of the window with the air with which stokers lean on their elbows at the side of a ship about to sail. One of the last packages to go aboard the R 34 was an official mail bag, weighing 25lb., besides private letters and several newspapers. It contained a message from President Wilson to the King, a letter from the Editor of the Philadelphia Public Ledger to the Editor of The Times, together with copies of the day's issue of the former journal, and a letter from the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Daniels, to the First Lord of the Admiralty. At the last moment a man pushed through the crowd up to the forward car, bearing a wooden box on his shoulder, which he lifted up to those inside. It was a case of rum obtained at the eleventh hour for the crew's rum ration. A minute later the hissing stopped, and the wide white pipe through which the hydrogen was conveyed dropped to the ground. The moment of departure had come.

THE OLD UNIVERSITIES.

The announcement that the Government have decided to appoint Royal Commissions to inquire into the conditions of Oxford and Cambridge will cause no surprise, says The Times. The two Universities have not come through the trial of war unscathed, and, if they are to be the leading forces in the renaissance of English education, the more both their strong and their weak points are understood the better. On the main, we believe that the Universities will be able to give a good account of their stewardship, and that in most respects they will prove to be worthier of sympathy than of censure.

THE GUILDHALL AND THE KING.

The Lord Mayor of London announced at the Court of Common Council yesterday that the King and Queen had fixed Tuesday, July 29th, for their visit to the Guildhall to receive an address from the Corporation in commemoration of peace.

General Pershing will be received at the Guildhall on Friday, July 18th, and presented with an address and a sword of honour.

FROM "THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.)

THE PEACE AND THE WORK OF PEACE.

President Ebert and the German National Assembly have ratified the Peace, which, however, will not be formally complete until the Allies and Associates have ratified it too, observes The Times. Even then, as President Wilson reminded his hearers in his first speech on American soil after his return, the work of peace will have only begun. The attitude of German statesmen, of the Weimar Assembly, and of the German Press plainly suggests that Germany will do nothing to make this work easy. We wish for the best, and we shall continue to hope for it, but our hope cannot ripen into an assurance, or even into confidence, until Germany has proved by a prolonged period of straightforward and honest policy that she has renounced from her heart the shameful and immoral doctrine that treaties are mere scraps of paper.

COAL INCREASE EXPLAINED.

The Times Parliamentary Correspondent gives a forecast of the White Paper to be published explaining the increase of 6s. per ton in the price of coal. It will, he says, contain the series of statistical tables which the Coal Controller, Sir Evan Jones, submitted to the Coal Commission on June 4, together with corrections bringing the calculations up to date. The estimate officially made at the beginning of June was that the deficiency on the working of the coal industry, on the basis of the estimated output for the next twelve months, after providing for guaranteed profits to owners at the rate of 1s. 2d. a ton, would be about £46,690,000, equal to 4s. 3d. a ton of output. It will be found that the estimated deficiency on the working of the mines, if the present price of coal to consumers is maintained unaltered, will be round about 5s. 9d. a ton. The Government has fixed the round figure of 6s. a ton in order to provide a small margin. This is not all. The figure of 6s. a ton is the increased charge at the pit-head to begin with. The retail price of coal will be uniformly increased by 6s. a ton all over the country. This uniformity, however, will not last long. Sir Eric Geddes, in his speech on the Transport Bill yesterday, foreshadowed an early increase in carriage rates, and coal consumers in London and other areas remote from the coalfields will then have to bear still higher burdens. It will be explained in the White Paper that the Government have based their calculations on the Sankey recommendation that the profits of coal owners should be limited to 1s. 2d. a ton. Legislation will be needed to make this recommendation effective. A bill has actually been drafted, and it will be introduced into the House of Commons as soon as the Government have defined their attitude to the recommendations of the final report of the Coal Commission.

THE CENTRAL GOVERNING FACT.

The central governing fact, remarks The Times Labour Correspondent, is that, while more men are employed in mining than a year ago, and while each of them is receiving substantially larger wages than a year ago, the output of coal is dwindling to danger point.

HOLLAND AND THE EX-KAISER.

The Times Political Correspondent in Paris states that a reply has been received to the Note sent by the Council of Four to the Dutch Government, calling attention to the necessity for close supervision of the ex-Kaiser and the ex-Crown Prince. The Note was sent just after the Kaiser was wrongly reported to have escaped. The Dutch reply is couched in terms which are considered in Conference circles to be unnecessarily curt. It is to the effect that Holland intends to fulfil all her international obligations, of the scope of which she is fully aware, and she requests the fullest liberty of exercising her sovereign rights as she sees fit.

THE TRANSPORT BILL PASSES.

The Transport Bill passed its third reading in the House of Commons yesterday, remarks The Times, after a division which surely marks, in quite another sense, the passing of the "National Party." When a party numbers only a couple of tellers it cannot expect to be taken very seriously. The principal feature of the debate was a long explanatory speech from Sir Eric Geddes, which may seem reasonable, and even, to some extent, convincing, until it is subjected to critical analysis. It is obvious that Sir Eric Geddes realises that he is in an awkward place, because he took the unusual course of endeavouring to answer the objections which he fears will be raised in the House of Lords.

THE ONLY HOPE OF MANKIND.

MR. WILSON AND THE LEAGUE.

ADDRESS TO THE SENATE.

The Press Association's Washington Correspondent, telegraphing on Thursday, says—President Wilson, in presenting the Peace Treaty with Germany to the Senate this afternoon, declared that the League of Nations had become a practical necessity and an indispensable instrumentality for the maintenance of the new order which the framers of the Treaty proposed to set up in the world. The fact that the Covenant of the League of Nations was the first substantive part of the Treaty to be worked out and agreed upon, while all else was in solution, helped to make the formulation of the rest easier. The President then reiterated the ideal for which the United States entered the war, and the part played by the Americans in securing the final victory. Describing the efforts of the Peace Conference to make the final triumph of freedom and right a lasting triumph, he said that old entanglements of every kind stood in the way, and the promises which Governments made to one another in the days when might and right were confused, and the power of the victor was without restraint, and the engagements which contemplated any dispositions of territory and extensions of sovereignty that might seem to the interests of those who had power to insist upon them, had been entered into without thought of what the peoples concerned might wish or profit by, and these could not always be honourably brushed aside. It was not easy, he continued, to graft the new order of ideas on the old, and some of the fruits of the grafting may, I fear, for the time be bitter; but, with very few exceptions, the men who sat with us at the peace table desired as sincerely as we did to get away from the bad influences, illegitimate purposes, and demoralising ambitions of international counsels and expedients out of which the sinister designs of Germany had sprung.

THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

President Wilson did not attempt to explain specific peace terms, and his address was almost wholly devoted to the League of Nations and American isolation. The President said—There can be no question of our ceasing to be a world Power. The only question is whether we can refuse the moral leadership that is offered us—whether we should accept or reject the confidence of the world. The war and the Peace Conference have already answered that question, and nothing but our mistaken action can alter it. At the end of the great war every enlightened judgment demanded that, at whatever cost of independent action, every Government that took thought for its people, or justice, or ordered freedom, should lend itself to the new purpose, utterly to destroy the old order of international politics. Statesmen might see difficulties in accomplishing this purpose, the President continued, but the people could see none, and would brook no denial. The League of Nations, he added, was not merely an instrument to adjust and remedy old wrongs under the new Treaty of Peace, but was the only hope of mankind.

President Wilson declared that as far as Germany was concerned the work of the Peace Conference stood complete. The difficulties encountered were very many, he said, and sometimes they seemed insuperable. It was impossible to accommodate the interests of so great a body of nations' interests, which directly and indirectly affected almost every nation in the world—without many minor compromises. The Treaty, as the result of this, is not exactly what we would have written; it is probably not what anyone of the national delegates would have written. I think that it will be found, however, that the compromises which were accepted as inevitable, nowhere cut to the heart of any principle. The work of the Conference squares, as a whole, with the principles agreed upon as the basis of peace, as well as with the practical possibilities of the international situation, which have to be faced and dealt with as facts. He added that he would presently lay before the Senate the special Treaty with France, the terms of which link with the present Treaty.

BREACHES OF PRECEDENT.

When President Wilson took the Peace Treaty to the Senate, says Reuter's Washington Correspondent, it was the first time that a President of the United States had presented a Treaty personally, and the first time that a message of presentation was read with the Senate's door open to the public. Another precedent is expected to be violated when the Senate orders the Treaty to be printed immediately for public circulation.

The situation confronting the President is one of many and vital possibilities. With every Senator present or paired, when the final ratification roll call is taken the Treaty and the League of Nations Covenant must receive a two-third majority—that is, 64 votes.

The first test will come when the President's opponents attempt to include various reservations. For this only a simple majority of 49 votes is required. The Administration leaders claim that 46 of 47 Democratic Senators, and at least eight Republicans, will vote against any reservations regarding the League, while the Republicans allege that all 49 Republicans and from two to ten Democrats will support many reservations expected to be proposed. Both sides, however, admit that the twenty Senators who have not taken a decided stand will give varying support to various proposals.

THE PRESIDENT AND TRADE WITH GERMANY.

Before going to the Senate on Thursday afternoon, says a Reuter message, President Wilson had a conference with the newspaper correspondents at the White House. He said that he believed that the American troops should stay on the Rhine until Germany delivered all the materials required under the Peace Treaty and the agreement with France separately, as he was unable to present the latter first. He was gratified at Germany's ratification of the Treaty, and felt that the Associated Powers should resume trade as quickly as possible in order to permit Germany's financial rehabilitation.

President Wilson felt that the United States must play a generous part in the reconstruction of Europe, but indicated that this should be accomplished on some sound basis of credit rather than by direct Government aid. Discussing the peace negotiations at Paris, the President informed the correspondents that the League of Nations Covenant would be included in every Treaty negotiated at Versailles. He was understood to take up the position that a two-thirds majority would be required to adopt any Senate reservation in ratifying the Peace Treaty. His opponents have been claiming that only a simple majority would be required.

THE SHANTUNG DECISION.

A resolution introduced by Senator Borah in the Senate on Thursday requested President Wilson to submit a copy of a letter which is said to have been written to him by General Bliss, on behalf of himself, Mr. Lansing, and Mr. White, protesting against the decision of the Peace Conference regarding Shantung.

PREMIER AND THE VICTORY LOAN.

The Prime Minister has sent the following message from Criccieth:—"The Victory Loan closes on Saturday. I urge everyone to try and outdo past achievements. The heroism and sacrifices, afloat and ashore, will be remembered by us all, and whole-hearted support of the Loan is the best form our gratitude can take. Let us demonstrate to the world that the patriotism of the whole country has not been exhausted even by its colossal efforts in the war."

ADMIRAL KOLTCHAK'S ARMY.

In an official despatch, dated Omsk, July 2nd, Admiral Koltchak announces that the retreat of his Army has come to an end. During the retreat the losses suffered were inconsiderable.

RAILWAY DISPUTE SETTLED.

The Press Association says that the dispute between the National Union of Railwaymen and the Caledonian Railway Company was settled yesterday morning on the basis of a 48-hour week and the allowances for meal times. The dispute between the Great Northern Railway and the National Union of Railwaymen remains unsettled.

It is believed that the Government may intervene in the Great Northern dispute. Mr. Hudson, Assistant General Secretary of the Union, visited the Board of Trade yesterday, while his executive was sitting at Sheffield.

GERMAN PROFESSOR AND CORK MUSICAL APPOINTMENT.

A meeting of the Sub-Committee of the Cork Municipal School of Music was held last night to consider applications for the post of Head Master and Professor of Traditional Music. Only one application for the position was received. This was from Mr. Karl Hardebeck, of Belfast, and was written altogether in Irish. The letter had to be translated into English for the Committee.

Mr. J. L. Fawsit moved, and Mr. Coughlan seconded, that the application be considered. The Lord Mayor moved that it be deferred, and the position be re-advertised.

After a long debate, the Lord Mayor's motion was carried by one vote.

THE PEACE.

RATIFICATION BILL.

LAST SCENES AT WEIMAR.

Telegraphing from Weimar on Wednesday the Press Association's Correspondent says:—The first reading of the Peace Treaty Ratification Bill being ended, there was a pause of three-quarters of an hour to allow the parties to consider the motion of the German National People's Party. The debate on the second reading lasted only one hour, but it was extremely animated. The German National People's Party were accused of pursuing party aims in submitting their resolution.

Herr Schiffer, ex-Minister of Finance, expressed lively regret that the motion had been introduced, as in his opinion it was only calculated to produce fresh confusion. All Democrats must vote against it. It was so clear that the extradition procedure demanded in the Treaty was an infraction of international law, that no fresh pronouncements by experts was necessary. Neither did it correspond with Germany's dignity to revive a question to which the Entente had already once replied with refusal.

Herr Groeber, speaking on behalf of the Centre Party, associated himself with almost all that Herr Schiffer had said, and accused the German Nationals, amid the loud applause of almost the whole House, of "wanting to cook their thin party soup with the fire of this motion."

Herr Schuelz (Bromberg), who protested against this remark, could scarcely make himself heard amidst the noisy anger of the House.

The Minister for Foreign Affairs (Herr Mueller) said he regretted that even this historic hour should be filled with party strife. The time for reservations, he said, had now passed. "There can only be one decision, 'Yes' or 'No,' and even this decision has really already been taken by the signing of the Treaty. The Right Party's motion will only be interpreted as a fresh piece of insincerity on the part of Germany by the Entente. The German Nationalists, continued Herr Mueller, desire to make a last appeal to the Entente's sense of justice, but such an appeal, and particularly from one of the German Nationalists, will have absolutely no success with our enemies.

Herr Lobe (Democrat) said—The Right Party has no right to appeal to justice. They would have served the Fatherland best if they had kept silence.

Herr Delbrueck, President of the German Nation People's Party, then managed to pacify the members by declaring that there had been no intention to take the House by surprise or to mislead it.

Herr Haase (Independent Socialist) and Herr Heinze (German People's Party) also briefly opposed the German Nationals motion, which was eventually rejected, only about 20 voting for it.

This ended the second reading.

No objection having been raised, the third reading was immediately taken, and the bill for the ratification of the Peace Treaty was then passed by 208 votes to 115, thus closing a memorable sitting.

A Berlin message, dated Thursday, says:—Herr Ebert, the President, ratified the Peace Treaty at 8 o'clock yesterday evening.

According to Vorwärts, the document was immediately sent to Versailles by courier.

FRANCE AND THE NAVAL AND MILITARY CLAUSES.

The Press Association's Paris Correspondent, writing on Thursday, says:—The Chamber yesterday heard the report of the Deputy, M. Pate, on the military and naval clauses of the Peace Treaty. In his report, he points out that, although the German Army is reduced to 100,000 men and 4,000 officers, this means one officer to every twenty-five men, which would form an excellent framework for a much larger army, which could be rapidly formed from young men trained in athletic associations. The report asks why Germany needs heavy artillery for police duty, and concludes—This so-called disarmament will require the French to remain armed beyond all anticipations. In regard to the naval clauses, the report complains that they are practically all in favour of Great Britain.

M. Barthou and M. Augagneur expressed the fear that as a result of the provisions of the Treaty, it would be impossible for France to reduce her military service as much as was desired.

EXECUTION OF THE TREATY.

Mr. Harmsworth, in reply to Lieutenant-Colonel Malone, in the House of Commons yesterday, said that a Sub-Committee had been appointed by the Peace Conference to supervise the execution of the Treaty with Germany. Sir Eyre Crowe, Assistant Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, had been appointed as British representative.

THE EX-KAISER.

The Amsterdam Telegraaf's Berlin Correspondent cites the Post, as stating that the "League of German Men and Women for the protection of the personal freedom and life of William II." has addressed an open letter to the ex-Kaiser, inviting him to return to Germany.

GERMAN STRIKES.

20,000 BOYS INVOLVED.

Writing from Cologne on July 8th, the Press Association's Correspondent says:—It is impossible to pick up a German paper to-day without finding news of some fresh strike, rioting or outbreak. To-day it is Hamm, Münster, Essen; to-morrow Hamburg and Hanover; the next day Munich breaks out again, and the railwaymen in Berlin decide on closing all traffic. So it goes on, and there seems to be no likelihood of the trouble coming to a definite end. No sooner do they damp down the fires of insurrection at one place than they burst out in another. The procedure seems now to follow a definite routine, modelled on the lines of what used to happen a few months ago in Dusseldorf and the industrial towns of the Ruhr valley. A strike is proclaimed, Government troops are drafted into the places to protect the workers or to check the rioting and plundering; then, as happened at Hanover yesterday, the troops are attacked by the mob, which does its best to disarm them and seize their weapons for its own use. Sometimes, if the detachment is a small one, the mob succeeds; and reinforcements have to be brought in to fight a civil war on a small scale.

Yesterday, in Hanover, the troops resisted and used their weapons in self-defence, with some results in the way of casualties. So the crowd turned its attention to attacking the various prisons and police stations, ultimately finding one where the guard suffered themselves to be disarmed. An old story that seems to repeat itself again and again with unvarying regularity, and with all the regular accompaniments, is the imposition of martial law, perhaps withdrawn under the threat of a general strike; more sporadic fighting, and, finally, the temporary dying down of the embers; while the same story repeats itself elsewhere. In Dusseldorf the other day, alarmed by the sums charged for fruit and vegetables, the authorities fixed maximum prices. This is to attack a symptom. The method may prove a palliative for the moment, but it obviously cannot be carried very far. Weimar has been dealing in a similar fashion with other foodstuffs—grain and meat; and the Social Democratic Party has issued a leaflet pointing out that strikers who paralyse railway traffic are, in the common phrase, only "cutting off their nose to spite their face." Yet in the next paragraph of the paper I read that the pupils of the secondary schools—this is presumably a comic relief—are starting a strike of their own, with all the apparatus of pickets and officials and the rest—a strike that already embraces about 20,000 boys.

SCIENCE AND THE WAR.

GREAT AIRCRAFT DEVELOPMENT.

Some of the scientific problems of the war and their solutions were referred to in the discussions which took place at the resumed "Victory" Conference of the North-East Coast Institution of Engineers and Shipbuilders at Newcastle yesterday. Lord Weir, in a paper on the development of aircraft design application during the war, mentioned that the development of civil aviation would not for many years absorb even a fraction of the war facilities, and a large amount of waste could not be avoided. With regard to the future of civil flying, Lord Weir said that great possibilities were in front of flying boats for inter-island and coastal traffic as in the West Indies and New Zealand. Sporting and popular use of aircraft also must not be neglected.

Sir Charles Parsons expressed the view that for long distances the airship would cut out the aeroplane, provided enough were provided. If they were to cross the Atlantic by air in the future it would be by airship.

Sir Dugald Clerk said that the Germans standardised in aircraft engines early in the war, and it was one of the worst things they did.

Brigadier-General Groves, of the Royal Air Force, agreed that there was a great future for the flying boat, the chances of which overland in a forced landing were greater than those of an aeroplane over the sea. He forecasted an airship of eight million cubic feet capacity—four times the size of the R 34—capable of travelling 15,000 miles, and with strong under carriages.

GOVERNMENT AND THE HAY CROP.

In the House of Lords yesterday, Lord Somerleyton, replying to Lord Hindlip, said that it was feared that the hay crop this year would be exceptionally poor, and the Government were now considering whether it was not advisable to retain some form of control to prevent prices soaring too high, and so having an effect on the supply of milk.

RISE IN COAL PRICES.

ANXIETY IN DUBLIN.

EFFECT ON THE POOR.

VIEWS OF TRADERS AND SHIPOWNERS.

It is difficult to judge whether the announcement that the Government have decided to raise the price of coal by 6s. a ton to the consumer has caused more surprise than indignation amongst those who will have to pay the increased demand, but there is no doubt whatever that it has brought about a condition of perturbation generally, and anxiety in the homes of the poor especially. In Dublin yesterday the offices of coal merchants were congested by applicants for supplies, and the eagerness to place orders became so emphatic and the number of prospective buyers so large that the merchants decided to close their offices at one o'clock. People waited in queues in the hope of booking orders at present prices, and found that it was impossible even to make sure of obtaining a supply at all, and the orders that were taken were accepted, it is understood, subject to the existing price on the date of delivery. It is felt that the workers of Dublin will have to confront dismal problems of economy raised by this unexpectedly large advance.

CROSS-CHANNEL FREIGHTS.

We are informed on excellent authority that it is improbable that there will be an increase in cross-Channel freights in consequence of the higher cost of coal. The amount of coal consumed on a cross-Channel trip, say, between the Mersey and Dublin, by a 500-ton steamer would be about twenty-five tons, and the increase of six shillings per ton on this amount would represent a sum of £7 10s. This sum spread over a cargo of 500 tons would mean, roughly, threepence halfpenny per ton on the quantity of coal burned on the trip. In view of the smallness of the amount, and of the agitation which has been carried on for some time for a reduction of freights, it is not considered likely that shippers will seek to raise their charges beyond their present level.

IRISH LABOUR VIEW.

Mr. William O'Brien, Secretary to the Irish Labour Party, gave his views on the situation yesterday, when, in an interview, he said that the increase would inflict great hardship on the worker. It was easy to see that it was a move by large monopolists and capitalists, through their agents, the Government, to discredit nationalisation of the coal mines, for which an overwhelming case had been made at the Coal Commission. Mr. Smillie and his colleagues, however, could be depended upon to see that it missed fire. It had been clearly shown at the Commission that huge "profiteering" had taken place in the coal industry, and that an increase in the price of coal was not justified, and tended further to inflate the profits of coal-owners. The only remedy, he added, was for the people to take control of this important industry, and until they did so they need not look for redress. The increase was so large that possibly it would have the effect of bringing about a decided reaction, and of forcing the people to grapple with the menace of monopoly immediately. There could be no prosperity in any industry so long as the vital industry of coal was in the hands of private exploiters.

EFFECT ON ELECTRICITY SUPPLY.

An important consideration in connection with the increase is its probable effect on the charges for power purposes. Mr. L. J. Kettle, City Electrical Engineer, expressed the opinion yesterday that an advance of 6s. a ton in the cost of coal would mean an increase of approximately one-fifth of a penny per unit in the cost of electricity, and stated that this raised the question whether or not the Electricity Committee would have to revise the scale of charges for current, because the prices were fixed merely for the purpose of keeping the undertaking on a sound financial basis, without aiming at big profit-making. It was the object of the Committee to keep the prices as low as possible, without asking the ratepayers to share in paying for the electricity which consumers were getting. They were most anxious to supply electricity at as low a price as possible for industrial purposes, but if the charges were not increased when the price of coal had gone up, consumers would get electric power at a much cheaper rate than those who used steam plants.

FREIGHT TO IRELAND.

The most important factor in fixing the price of coal in Dublin, said Mr. Kettle, was the abnormal freight which was charged for cross-Channel traffic. The freight for coal coming to the Corporation in pre-war times was 3s. 6d. a ton, and now it was 14s. 8d. a ton. This increase did not seem to be justified by increased wages or higher prices for material, and it ought to be possible to set off, and more than set off, the increased price of coal to Irish consumers by a reduction of freight. Some time ago the rates for carrying coal had been reduced by 25 per cent. for boats of over 1,000 tons burden, and there seemed to be no reason why the rates on smaller craft should not be reduced by 25 per cent. also. Mr. Kettle advocated the necessity of developing the sources of power in Ireland, and mentioned the possibilities of water and peat in this respect. He had no hesitation, he said, in stating that all the power required for Irish purposes could be obtained more cheaply from water-power and peat than from coal which was imported.

MERCHANTS AND SHIPOWNERS.

The city coal merchants have, as far as can be learned, been as much surprised as the consumers, and it was stated by one of the merchants yesterday that the position in the trade would be seriously affected by the new impost. Not only were existing stocks in Dublin low, but it was feared that adequate supplies would not be easily obtainable, especially in view of the permit system. Notwithstanding the fact that wages had been advanced on two occasions recently and that the number of working hours had been reduced, consumers were not charged more, because it was believed that the Government would have put an extra shilling or two shillings on the cost of coal, and also that freight rates would have been reduced in order to relieve the consumer. While the freights remained unaltered the additional increase would have to be borne.

A Dublin shipowner, on being asked what he thought would be the effect of the increased price of coal, said—"We will all have to pay. Everybody objects to the increase. It will be an awful thing for the poor. I don't think that it will very seriously affect the manufacturers over here. The increase will rectify itself later on, but we will have to pay more for everything."

A merchant engaged extensively in the coal trade, said that the increase proposed was due to the recommendation of the Coal Commission, and it merely represented the increase in the wages to be paid to the miners. One effect of it would be to increase the freights of steamers, on account of the enhanced cost of the bunker coal. It would also mean a very considerable difference to factories, as it would represent in their outlay for coal consumption an increase of about 20 per cent. Indeed, he observed, it will affect every industry in city and country. At present, miners are earning huge wages and are working short time. That is really the root of the whole matter, and the cause of the increase. As far as the working classes are concerned, it will hit them very badly. Coal had already reached a price higher than it had ever gone to before, and now, with an additional six shillings per ton, it would mean a blue look-out for every class, but more especially the middle-class consumer. The woollen manufacturers are taking orders to be delivered two years hence, and, of course, they will be severely hit by the higher prices.

COAL STOCKS IN DUBLIN.

As far as could be judged from a look round the "banks" at the port of Dublin, stocks in hand yesterday seemed generous enough; but it was explained that a very considerable portion of some of these piled-up stacks was not household fuel, but steam or manufacturing coal, which would be of little or no use for domestic fire grates. Further, it is apparent that a good many steamer cargoes reaching the North side of the Liffey are being transferred into railway wagons and despatched to destinations other than Dublin.

SERIOUS EFFECT UPON BELFAST INDUSTRIES.

The seriousness of the proposed increase of six shillings per ton is fully realised in industrial circles in Belfast. If the increase is put into operation, the cost of production of all commodities is bound to go up. With prices already at a very high level, this new addition to the burden of production is causing grave concern to manufacturers. In some industries it will mean the difference between profit and loss, and in others it may involve closing down altogether.

The following notice has been published by the Superintendent and Secretary of the Northern Area Coal Control:—"Notice is hereby given to all coal consumers that merchants can only accept orders for despatch when coal is available, and for delivery in rotation at current prices on date of delivery."

MONDAY'S DEBATE.

A meeting of the Emergency Sub-Committee of the Parliamentary Coal Committee was held at the House of Commons yesterday. The statement of Sir Auckland Geddes as to the increased price of coal was carefully considered, and the effect which the rise will have on staple industries was gone into in some detail. The meeting decided to arrange that the views of these industries should, as far as possible, be adequately represented at the debate on Monday.

The indications are, says the Central News Political Correspondent, that the criticism of the rise in coal prices in Monday's debate will take two definite lines. The Labour Party will urge that the amount of the rise is unjustified by facts, and will demand complete figures to prove the necessity of the action which has been taken. The total rise in the cost of coal to the consumer has been 16s. 6d. per ton, and Mr. Adamson insists that the last increase of 2s. 6d. was unwarranted. The Asquith Liberals will concern themselves mainly with demanding a full statement of the Government's policy in regard to mines. It is scarcely likely that Mr. Bonar Law will be in a position to satisfy this demand. The Government have not yet decided on a policy. The predominant view is that they will announce another Commission to discover the causes of decreased output. It is certain that the rank and file of the Government's supporters are in no mood to tolerate any scheme which savours of nationalisation, and the hope is that the feeling against it in the country will grow materially stronger.

R 34's HOMEWARD JOURNEY.

THE SOUTHERN ROUTE.

MAKING GOOD PROGRESS.

At 6.40 on Thursday morning the Air Ministry made the following announcement:—"R 34 left Roosevelt Field, Long Island, at 11.57 p.m. on Wednesday, New York time, for East Fortune, Scotland."

An Exchange Mineola telegram says:—R 34 made a short trip over New York before proceeding on her homeward voyage.

The Air Ministry has received information that the position of R 34 at 8 a.m., Greenwich time, was 40.47 N., 70.30 W.

At 8 a.m. American time, R 34 sent a wireless telegram to Washington stating that at 11.10, Greenwich time, the position was 40.15 N., 65.50 W.

The Wireless Station at Ottercliff, Maine, received at 11.16 a.m. the following message from R 34:—"Now doing 80 miles. Your signals very clear. How far are we now?"

The Air Ministry announces that a message received from the R 34 gives her position on Thursday at 4 p.m. (G.M.T.) as 42.00 N., 60.50 W. The message concludes—"Doing 60 knots. All's well."

A New York telegram, dated Wednesday, says:—It is stated by the officers of R 34 that if the weather is favourable the vessel will return by the southern route across the ocean, and if the winds in England permit, she will fly over London. They declare that the climatic conditions in the North Atlantic were bad for R.34, though she did what was expected of her. The airship will carry forty pounds of mail for England on her return voyage, including two gold medals, awarded by the Aero Club of America, to Captain Sir John Alcock and Lieutenant-Commander Sir W. Brown. Sergeants Turner and Anders will replace wireless operator Edwards and stowaway Ballantine in the crew, on her return flight.

FARM LABOURERS' DISPUTE.

SERIOUS SITUATION IN COUNTY KILDARE.

The Labour trouble is still spreading in Co. Kildare, and farmers are beginning to be anxious about the hay harvest, which is now in full swing. Several large fields of hay at Ballymore-Eustace, the property of Mr. George Wolfe, D.L., were thrown down on Tuesday, and scattered broadcast in the fields, owing, it is alleged, to his having given his men notice to lock-out.

Our Naas Correspondent says:—The gravity of the situation created in County Kildare by the dispute between the Farmers' Union and the Transport and General Workers' Union has been accentuated within the past few days. The entire county is now involved, and there is virtually a complete stoppage of work, which cannot but have the most serious consequences should it be prolonged. So far it would appear that a number of farmers have repudiated the action of the Farmers' Union in declaring a lock-out, and have refused to serve notice on their employés who are members of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union. The picketing of farms is being carried out, and in some cases police are also patrolling in the neighbourhood of the farms affected. Offers by the farmers of 2s. an hour for haymaking are not meeting with success.

A fresh development may, however, be expected if a number of men, ex-soldiers and others in receipt of unemployment allowances, are offered work on affected farms. In case of refusal it is thought that they may lose their weekly grant of 29s. A meeting of the Farmers' Union will be held in Naas to-day, when the situation will be discussed.

Our Athy Correspondent states that inquiries made on Wednesday at the Athy offices of the Transport Workers' Union show that in the immediate district 161 men and women have gone on strike as a result of the lock-out notices served on them by their employers, at the instance of the Co. Kildare Executive of the Farmers' Union. In all, it is calculated that the unemployed labourers connected with the Transport Union in South Kildare total 210.

At the meeting of the Athy Board of Guardians on Wednesday the matter was referred to, and the suggestion made that a conference should be held between the Executives of the Farmers' and Labourers' Unions, with a view to effecting a settlement.

The Clerk, Mr. M. E. Doyle, referring to the cause of the present Labour troubles, said that they originated in Celbridge, where the labourers struck work without notice on certain farms. On Wednesday some farmers, it is stated, withdrew the lock-out notices.

DISQUIETING INCIDENTS IN COUNTY MEATH.

Extraordinary measures were taken by agricultural labourers who are on strike in South Meath. On Wednesday morning large numbers of them posted themselves on the roads leading to Dublin, and at Kilmessan, Drumree, Batterstown, and Dunboyne railway stations, in order to prevent stock being sent to Dublin by farmers who are parties to the dispute. Cattle and sheep were turned back and driven home, and only in cases where a permit from the local Strike Committee was produced were the animals allowed to be loaded. The names of the strikers present were taken by the police, who were on duty at the time. It was stated that if stock did get through from the affected area, drovers in Dublin, who were members of the union, would refuse to handle it. Goods were also held up, except in cases where a permit was shown. A general boycott regarding food supplies is in operation, and shopkeepers in the towns mentioned have been forced to refuse to supply goods to farmers who decline to conform to the demands of the Transport Union.

On a farm near Dunshaughlin, a lady, who was told to bring back two horses which were being led to a field where non-union men were employed, drew a revolver and threatened to fire. The party who approached her withdrew, but, returning, compelled the non-union workers to cease work.

It is feared that the strike will have a very serious affect on agricultural operations in the district.

DUBLIN LABOUR DISPUTES.

It is understood that the Lord Mayor of Dublin has arranged a meeting in connection with the threatened strike of grave-diggers employed at Mount Jerome and Glasnevin cemeteries, and that the strike, which was to take place to-morrow, has been postponed.

A conference between representatives of the employés of Messrs. Smyth and Co., sack-makers, and of the firm has been arranged on the subject of increased wages, and is to be held in the office of the Ministry of Labour.

BASIS OF CALCULATION.

WHITE PAPER TO BE ISSUED.

In the House of Commons yesterday,

Mr. Adamson said—May I ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will issue a White Paper before the coal debate on Monday as to the basis of calculation upon which the Government decided to increase the price of coal by 6s. per ton? (Cheers.)

Sir Auckland Geddes—Instructions have already been given for such a paper to be prepared for circulation. (Cheers.)

APPREHENSION IN BIRMINGHAM.

The proposed increase in the price of coal has caused grave apprehension among Birmingham manufacturers, who are already handicapped by the high costs in combating foreign competition. On the Iron Exchange business was dislocated, producers withdrawing quotations for the time being. Rises of £1 per ton in pig iron and of at least 35s. in finished iron were foreshadowed. The Municipal gas undertaking estimates that the additional cost of coal will be £240,000 per annum, and that an increase to ordinary consumers of at least sixpence per 1,000 cubic feet will be imperative.

SIR CHARLES PARSONS' VIEWS.

Sir Charles Parsons, interviewed at Newcastle yesterday on the threatened advance of 6s. in coal, said that it would be a terrible disaster to the country. Owing to increased cost of manufacture, it would put us out of court altogether. In shipping circles it was pointed out that the increase would make it easier for America to compete with us in the coal markets. Already the Americans could land coal in Stockholm probably cheaper than it could be sent from the Tyne, and the proposed advance would almost enable the Americans to land coal in our ports at less than home prices.

PARLIAMENT.

THE TRANSPORT BILL.

THIRD READING CARRIED.

STATEMENT BY SIR ERIC GEDDES.

THE NEW MINISTRY'S PROPOSALS.

In the House of Commons yesterday, on the order for the third reading of the Ministry of Ways and Communications Bill,

Sir Eric Geddes, the Minister-designate, made a statement as to the organisation of the new department. At the outset he referred to his statement on the second reading of the bill with regard to the loss on the railways. That statement, he said, had apparently caused some misunderstanding. The position was that in the early months of this year the estimated increased cost of operating the railways over the 1913 cost was at the rate of 90 to 100 million pounds a year, and, assuming that the same traffic would pass in 1919 as in 1913, that sum would fall on the taxpayer, and in that sense it was a loss to the taxpayer.

Mr. Joynson-Hicks—You must assume the same traffic and the same rates.

Sir E. Geddes—Yes. That estimated excess cost had since been increased by the department responsible to 104 to 109 millions. That estimate was arrived at in the light of experience and full consideration of the concessions made to employés. Further consideration and investigation during the past six months had revealed possibilities of economies and other credit factors which gave an estimated nett deficit payable by the taxpayer for the current financial year of sixty millions. Such an estimate at a time like the present must be very uncertain. For instance, the increased cost of coal might put five million pounds on the the bill at once. That sixty millions had got to be made good, including, of course, the guarantee of the nett receipts of 1913 to the railway shareholders, which were between 45 and 50 millions, and would roughly account for 50 of the 60 millions.

PROPOSED IMPROVEMENTS.

He instanced directions in which it was proposed to effect improvements. There would under the bill be the elimination of competitive services, the common use of all rolling stocks, where suitable for the purpose, the elimination of all private waggons, the increased capacity of the lines to carry more traffic, and the decreased cost of traction by judicious electrification. The various measures would be taken progressively. It would take longer than two years for them to reach fruition. If during the ensuing two years they were to proceed on the principle that the surest way to national bankruptcy was to go on subsidising services, and that each service must, generally speaking, stand on its own legs—(hear, hear)—then he thought it was inevitable that for a time, at any rate, freight rates should go up. It was not only a question of money, but of the actual capacity of the lines.

COASTAL TRAFFIC DEAD.

Our coastal traffic, which represented 70 million tons a year, was now practically dead on account of the subsidy to the railway. Traffic would not be sent at coastal rates when it could be sent at the lower rates of a subsidised railway. The effect was to kill a very valuable business. (Hear, hear.) Nor could the private carter live against the subsidised railway carter. They would need legislation to deal with railway rates. The railway-owned waggons, numbering 700,000, were 75,000 short of what they should be on the normal progressive development of waggons, and to make good that deficiency we must get building going on an abnormal basis.

DOCKS AND ROADS.

With regard to docks it was proposed to invite the railway and the dock authorities to come together and try the effect of co-operation in improving transport arrangements. As to roads, he was one who believed that the future of this country, both with regard to agriculture and housing, depended on good roads. (Hear, hear.) In other countries light railways and tramways had been developed, but the conditions were fundamentally different here, where the country was not so flat. He hoped that we would be able to make a big development of our roads. We were fortunate in having probably the finest road-makers in the world at our disposal. Our roads were not fitted for the heavy traffic. We must get on to them, if we were going to join up the countryside; nor were they wide enough.

THE WATERWAYS.

Canals seemed to present the most difficult problem. He proposed to take up the matter at the point at which the Royal Commission on Canals left off, and to see if we could not develop a policy of gradually improving our waterways on a definitely thought-out system.

ORGANISATION.

As to organisation, it was not intended, at any rate during the ensuing two years, to centralise the management of these transport undertakings at Whitehall, with the exception of roads, for which there would be a separate branch. It was proposed to organise the Ministry in separate departments. In the event of the Ministry being established, he had arranged the following appointments of heads of departments:—Civil Engineering, Sir Alexander Gibb; Mechanical Engineering, Lieut.-Col. L. Simpson; Consultant Mechanical Engineer, Sir John Aspinall; Traffic Department, Sir Phillip Nash; Finance and Statistics, Sir J. George Beharrell; Development Department, Rear-Admiral Sir Charles Martin De Bartolomé; Public Safety and Labour, Sir William Marwood; Roads Department, Brig.-Gen. Sir Henry P. Maybury; Secretarial and Legal, Sir R. Francis Dunnell. Sir Hardman Lever would represent the Treasury, and would be in financial control of the new Ministry. It was suggested that the bill was a first step towards nationalisation. In considering the problem the Government came to the conclusion that there was only one alternative to a bill like this at the present time, and that was practically the immediate nationalisation of the railways. They did not want to go for that now. (Cheers.)

Mr. Wilson Fox welcomed the bill, although he did not agree with everything that it contained. He had formed the conclusion that some large measure was necessary in order to prevent the waste that was going on in connection with the various agencies concerned with transport in this country. The Ministry would make it its business to help commercial men to carry on their businesses effectively, and would have power to come to the House for its approval of even larger schemes designed in the national interest.

General Sir A. Hunter Weston said that a Ministry of Control in transport was necessary for success, and was amply justified in France, where it led to marvellous results under Sir E. Geddes.

SIR R. COOPER.

Sir R. Cooper moved the rejection of the bill. On the second reading he came to the conclusion that the principles upon which it was based were highly dangerous to the welfare of the country. He was prepared to believe that, on the whole, the bill as it emerged from Committee was better than it was, but its fundamental principles had not changed in the slightest degree. The bill not only took over full control of all our transport system, but it also took responsibility for their finance and administration. He maintained that there was no mandate for nationalisation at the general election, and that the real object of the bill was the nationalisation of our transport system. It was nothing but industrial revolution, and would cost infinitely more to work than it would under private enterprise.

A CHARTER OF SYNDICALISM.

It was not the time to embark on a measure which would cost hundreds of millions if properly carried out. Their experience of Government control during the war was not encouraging enough to justify the belief that their measure would be a success. If it was certain that Sir Eric Geddes would long continue as the head of the Department, he should not have so much misgiving as to results; but, fettered by a bureaucracy of civil servants, there was bound to be a great muddle. He conceived the bill to be nothing more than the foundation stone of a charter of Syndicalism. The bill was putting vast powers unnecessarily and wrongly into the hands of men who had recently been ruthlessly repudiated by the industrial communities, and, therefore, moved its rejection.

General Page Croft seconded the rejection. Such control as the bill gave could only lead to nationalisation. Such was the opinion of men of railway experience. Nationalisation was only justifiable in industries which had completely failed, such as canals. We possessed the best railways, roads, and docks in the world, and a measure such as this could only have the effect that it would make men hesitate to launch out into those services from the fear of State interference. It would have the effect of cooling the spirit of men concerned in these great industries. He believed that the bill had been forced upon the Government, simply because the principal members of the Government had come to the conclusion that it was desirable to interfere with the most complex question of wages, and in matters which might be settled between the masters and the men. If the Minister grasped at holding power over all the industries of the country, he would be in danger of breaking the great party which supported him, as well as the industrial system of the country.

MR. CLYNES.

Mr. Clynes said that it seemed that the events of the past five years had left unmoved the proposer of the rejection of the bill. He appeared to think that reconstruction meant leaving matters alone. According to the seconder of the motion, it was proper for the Government to come to the rescue of unsuccessful undertakings, such as the canals, but that it should not concern itself with great enterprises which were vital to the interests of the masses of the people. From his own experience in connection with State departments, he could say that their work in this respect had been very beneficial, as they had opened their doors widely to the approach of persons of competence and experience from outside, who had knowledge of what they were doing. The Labour members regarded the bill as a genuine and business-like attempt to reduce confusion and to make the best of our means of transport. The mover and seconder of the rejection taunted members of their own party with having deserted their political and economic principles. His comment on that was that a stage could be reached where they had to choose between party ties and the needs of the nation. The bill was not the most robust proposal that the public expected, following the hopes raised by public pronouncements and Ministerial declarations before the last election. They welcomed the bill which, if not in the direction of State ownership, was a step, at least, in the direction of the exercise of State supervision and control over agencies which, in the main, were the immediate needs of the trade of this country.

Sir F. Flannery said that nothing but prejudice and lack of logic could explain the opposition to the bill, which was a thoroughly practical and workable measure. He considered the bill a barrier against nationalisation.

Dr. D. Murray supported the bill.

MR. BONAR LAW.

Mr. Bonar Law said that there never had been a bill in which the House had taken greater interest. He did not believe that the question of nationalisation entered into the matter at all. This was a problem of immediate action which had to be faced. The Government was bound to run the railways for two years, and the question was whether they should spend money and develop them so as to get the best results. They could not afford to allow a great service run at the taxpayers' expense to become derelict during the time that the taxpayers were running it.

THE DIVISION.

The House divided, when there voted—

For the third reading	245
Against	0
Majority	245

The division had been forced by Sir R. Cooper, who moved the rejection of the bill, and he and General Page Croft were the tellers against the third reading. The announcement of the result was received with loud laughter.

OTHER BILLS.

The following bills which have passed through the House of Lords passed through all their stages—Solicitors (Articled Clerks) Bill; Matrimonial Causes (Dominions Troops) Bill; Grant of Administration (Bonds) Bill; Law Agents' Apprenticeship War Services (Scotland) Bill, and the Weights and Measures (Leather Measurement) Bill.

The British Mercantile Marine Uniform Bill, which has passed the Lords, was read a third time.

NEXT WEEK'S BUSINESS.

Mr. Bonar Law, replying to Sir D. Maclean, said that on Monday business would be Supply, to enable the discussion to take place on the price of coal; on Tuesday and Wednesday the Finance Bill, and on Thursday Supply, with the Post Office Vote.

Replying to Sir F. Hall, he said that he was doubtful whether it would meet the wish of the House to extend the time for questions. (Cheers.)

Mr. MacVeagh—Is the right hon. gentleman aware that in the case of the Irish questions it usually takes four supplementary questions to get one answer? (Cheers.)

Mr. Bonar Law—I have not specially noticed that. It is a very serious reflection on those who put the questions, and not on those who answer. (Loud cheers.)

VEHICLE BUILDERS AND DISCHARGED SOLDIERS.

Mr. Marriott asked the Minister for Labour whether it was the case that the Railway Vehicle Builders' Union, while admitting that they had no members unemployed, had refused to allow a certain firm to employ discharged soldiers, on the ground that they were not members of the Union, and that the said Union, notwithstanding, refused to admit men into the Union; and what action the right hon. gentleman proposed to take.

Sir R. Horne—I presume that the hon. member refers to the dispute which has arisen at the firm of Messrs. Charles Roberts' works at Horbury. I am in communication with the Union in question on the subject. I am not aware that the grounds of their action are those stated in the question.

Mr. Marriott—Is the right hon. gentleman aware that the men belonging to this Union are at present out on strike, and that the building and repairing of wagons very urgently needed is being delayed thereby?

Sir R. Horne—That is an entirely different question.

The House rose at 9 o'clock.

MARCONI COMPANY'S CLAIM.

WIRELESS ON COMMERCIAL BASIS.

THE BALLYBUNION STATION.

Mr. Frank James Brown, Assistant Secretary of the Post Office, was under examination for the fifth day when the hearing of the Marconi Company's claim was resumed yesterday.

In further cross-examination by Sir Edward Carson, K.C., M.P., witness said that it was in the mind of the Government when the contract was made that there would be an extension of the wireless system, but he did not agree that that involved a vast increase of wireless. It was, however, he thought, a safe proposition that the more wireless stations that were erected the more wireless would grow. Witness insisted that the stations in the Imperial Chain were principally intended for strategic purposes. In the first instance the stations were intended for communications with ships. But it was found that the ships as then fitted could not receive communications from the stations owing to the length of the wireless waves.

Sir E. Carson—Is there even now any company working wireless on a commercial basis within the British Empire? No, but there are Government stations working on a commercial basis between Australia and New Zealand. The New Zealand wireless, he believed, was not Marconi.

Do you know it was set up by the German company—the Telefunken? I thought it was.

And that they infringed the Marconi patent? That I don't know.

Sir E. Carson told witness after one answer not to argue with him.

The Solicitor-General protested that Sir E. Carson was not fair, and said that he had been speaking so strongly that he probably had not appreciated what the witness had said.

Sir E. Carson—Do you complain of my speaking loudly?

The Solicitor-General—Personally, it is very inconvenient. (Laughter.)

Sir E. Carson—Well, could not you go away? (Laughter.)

The Solicitor-General—No, it is my duty to stay here.

Witness said that the Poulsen Company erected a wireless station at Ballybunion, and he had heard that the Marconi Company afterwards bought it for £30,000.

Sir E. Carson—Did not the Poulsen Company fail to carry on a commercial service to the satisfaction of the Post Office? They never tried. They were making experiments for the Post Office, and some of the later experiments were quite satisfactory.

When was that? In the early part of 1915. Witness said that he did not dispute that the Marconi Company had erected thirteen stations for the Admiralty.

Sir E. Carson—On the Marconi system? Yes, and other apparatus was put in by the Admiralty themselves—the Poulsen arc.

And they have to pay for those stations? I hope they have already done so.

Sir E. Carson—Well, I am afraid not.

Witness said that a French Government expert had been asked to come over and give evidence in the case. He had been to London, but was only able to stay there three days, and had returned to France.

Sir E. Carson—Did he refuse to say that the Poulsen system in use in France was the best, or that they could use it independently of the Marconi patents? He did not. To the best of my belief, he said the Poulsen system was working efficiently at the French stations.

Did he refuse to say it worked independently of other patents? He certainly gave me to understand it was being worked independently of other patents.

The case was adjourned.

IRISH PEACE CELEBRATIONS.

ATTITUDE OF BOARDS OF GUARDIANS.

The Local Government Board's letter regarding the celebration of peace was read at various meetings of Boards of Guardians yesterday. At the meeting of the Enniscorthy Guardians, the Chairman, Mr. T. Cleary, said that Ireland had not gained anything by the peace. He would insist that the Guardians as a body should take no part in the celebration of England's peace.

Eventually it was agreed to grant extra rations to the inmates and increase outdoor relief to the poor.

CIRCULAR BURNED BY ATHY GUARDIANS.

When the circular was read at the meeting of the Athy Guardians, Mr. L. Heffernan, Chairman, asked did it refer to peace in Tipperary. Mr. Dunn proposed that the circular be burned. A discussion followed, in which the Government's policy in Ireland was criticised. Subsequently Mr. Dunn brought the circular outside the boardroom, and applying a match to it held it until the circular burned itself out, amidst expressions of approval from the Guardians, who were then leaving the meeting.

SPECIAL EXTRA.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S RECEPTION.

A Reuter's message fro mWashington, dated Thursday, states—President Wilson was given an ovation when he entered the Senate and at the conclusion of his speech. The President formally presented the Treaty to the Senate, and the official copy was immediately referred to the Foreign Relations Committee, and was rushed to the printer. Fifty thousand copies of the Treaty and of the President's address have been ordered to be printed. The President in his room in the Senate Chamber received several Senators, and discussed the Treaty with them. While he was thus engaged the Republican leaders conferred in the Republican cloak room, those attending including Senators Lodge and Borah. Nearly every Democratic Senator visited the President. Senator Kenyon was the only Republican Senator to call and exchange greetings.

EVACUATION OF PERIN.

A Times message from Ekaterinburg (Urles) gives a graphic description of the evacuation of Perm by the Siberian Army. The withdrawal was carried out under great difficulties, but practically all the arms and stores of the garrison, as well as the inhabitants, were removed. The credit, thereforefi is due almost entirely to the skill and courage of Brigadier-General Jack, assisted by a few British and Russian officers. Only one line of railway was available. Under Brigadier-General Jack's direct supervision, and thanks mainly to his personal efforts, 72 trains fully loaded were cleared within 48 hours. After its last desperate effort to delay the Red Army, the flotilla of light craft ascended the River Kama, to Levshine, where it landed and entrained its guns, which were safely evacuated with the crews. Thereafter the contents of the naphtha tanks were emptied into the river, and caught fire. The whole flotilla was destroyed. As the last trains left the city the whole landscape was lit up by the conflagration, and the air was rent by the explosions of ammunition and the rattle of the enemy's machine guns.

HOW CANADA WENT DRY.

Few people in Great Britain, according to a Special Correspondent of the Daily News, realise to what extent the prohibition movement has spread in Canada. It excited the amazement and horror of no less a person than Lord Birkenhead in 1918, who commented on it with disapproval in his published narrative of his American wanderings.

The Canada Temperance Act (better known as the Scott Act, from its pilot, Sir Richard Scott), which was passed in 1878, provided for local option by a majority vote of the electors in any municipality. When the Act came into operation it found greater favour in the rural areas than in the towns and cities, but every year there were numerous contests for its adoption or repeal. Goldwin Smith denounced it as conducive to hypocrisy and contempt for the law, declared that the distillers encouraged its spread, and that a profitable business in illicit liquor selling flourished. In their opposition days, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Liberal Party had expressed sympathy with the idea of Dominion-wide prohibition, and when they came to power they held a national plebiscite on the subject in 1898. All the provinces, save Quebec gave a plurality for prohibition, but the majority was so small that the Laurier Cabinet did not feel justified in passing any legislation.

Local option, however, steadily gained ground. By 1913 60 per cent. of the municipalities in Ontario had adopted it, and 81 per cent. in New Brunswick. Prince Edward Island was "dry" to all intents and purposes, and in Nova Scotia the city of Halifax alone retained the licence system.

The first real victory for the "dry" cause came in Manitoba, after the expulsion from office of the Roblin Government, which had maintained itself in power with the aid of the liquor interests. The new Liberal Government passed into legislation, and the people subsequently ratified by a popular majority of 54,084 to 26,502, the Manitoba Temperance Act. It provided that no person should sell or expose for sale any intoxicating liquor without first procuring a druggist's wholesale or retail licence. Wholesale druggists were to be permitted to sell ten gallons of liquor to persons engaged in mechanical or scientific pursuits, and were also allowed to sell five gallons to medical practitioners, and a certain quantity for sacramental purposes. Importation was not forbidden. Section 49 forbade the keeping of liquor by any person except a druggist in any place except a dwelling-house. Brewers and distillers could manufacture for export. It was far from a measure of complete prohibition, but it absolutely abolished the open bar when it came into effect on June 1, 1916.

The province of Saskatchewan had closed its bars in 1915, and instituted a sort of Gothenburg or Governmental dispensary system modelled on the practice of the State of North Carolina. On December 11, 1916, a referendum resulted in a majority of six or seven to one in favour of the complete abolition of the dispensary system. Alberta and British Columbia followed suit and passed Prohibition Acts, which popular votes ratified.

In 1916 the special licence privileges of the city of Halifax, the last stronghold of the traffic in Nova Scotia, were done away with, and Prince Edward Island had no reforms to carry out. Quebec often takes up a contrary attitude to the rest of Canada. She lingered behind the other provinces in the matter of liquor legislation, though enforcing stringent regulations as to the hours and conditions of sale. In 1918, however, under the pressure of public opinion, a prohibition law was passed, to come into effect on May 1, 1919, for the duration of the war.

The measure was very unpopular with the French-Canadians, and this session the Gouin Cabinet decided to submit the question of restoring beer and wine licences to a referendum. The poll resulted in an overwhelming victory for the "wets," and wine and beer are to be sold in restaurants and by wholesale stores, though there will be no restoration of the bar. Save for the vagaries of this solitary province and a special reservation in Ontario in favour of native wines, the overt sale and manufacture of liquor is at an end in the Dominion of Canada to-day.

The provinces were only able to deal with the sale of liquor. Its importation, transportation, and manufacture came under the purview of the Federal Government. In 1917 the Doherty Federal Act gave the provinces power to enforce any legislation they might pass, even if it encroached on the Federal sphere of manufacture and importation. However, an enormous inter-provincial traffic had sprung up which was profitable to many parties, and contained in itself many deplorable evils. The people of Ontario got their liquor from Manitoba and vice versa, and liquor dealers who secured locations at strategic points on the boundary lines made profits beyond their wildest dreams. Public opinion was aroused, and the Union Government passed a series of Orders in Council, the last of which, in 1918, not only ended the traffic, but absolutely forbade the manufacture of intoxicating liquor in any province in the Dominion. Since then Quebec has voted for the retention of wine and beer, and the question of provincial rights has emerged.

This session the Federal Government has brought down a Prohibition Bill which confirms for one year the main tenor of the Orders in Council, but allows the provinces full power to enact what legislation they please within their own bounds. Quebec may consume wine and beer, but she may not export it to other provinces. The effect in general will be to establish a system of provincial option. Sir William Hearst, the Premier of Ontario, has now announced that his province will take a referendum in the autumn on the subject of the sale of wine and beer, and its result will help to decide the policy of the other provincial Governments.

FATAL FLYING ACCIDENT.

FOUR MEN BURNT TO DEATH.

A Marseilles telegram, dated Wednesday, says:—A flying accident occurred this morning in the neighbourhood of Pourrières (Var). It appears that as the result of an explosion in the petrol tank a British postal aeroplane, No. 4591, with a crew of four British military airmen, broke into flames, and crashed to the ground. The four occupants were burnt to death. The British base here at once despatched motor cars to fetch the dead bodies of the airmen, whose identity has not yet been established.

SWANSEA POLLING.

Polling took place in Swansea East yesterday, the candidates being Alderman David Matthews (Coalition Liberal) and Councillor David Williams (Labour). The indications were that the voting was heavier than on the occasion of the last election. A feature was the large number of women who voted throughout the day. The general impression last night was that Mr. Matthews had been returned, and it was believed that the advance in coal prices alienated considerable support from the Labour candidate, who had been personally supported by Mr. Smillie.

In the Senate on Wednesday (says a Melbourne telegram) the Government were urged to take action to settle the seamen's strike, pointing out the serious condition of Tasmania and Queensland. Mr. Miller replied that the Government had exhausted all peaceful methods to obtain a settlement, but it was prepared to take further action if required.

SUMMER ASSIZES.

COUNTY CAVAN.

A PEACEABLE COUNTY.

The Cavan Assizes were opened yesterday by the Lord Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Gibson.

In addressing the Grand Jury, the Lord Chief Justice said that there were 18 specially reported offences since last Assizes against 11 for the corresponding period. There was one case of raiding for arms, but he believed that they would have no trouble in finding a true bill. The other cases were of the usual kind, and, on the whole, he had to congratulate the county on its present state.

Patrick Mooney, charged with killing his wife near Mullagh, was declared insane.

COUNTY WATERFORD.

SATISFACTORY POLICE REPORTS.

Lord Justice Ronan opened the Waterford Summer Assizes yesterday.

Addressing the County Grand Jury, his lordship said that as to the state of the country, from the returns of the police and other information, he could only say that it was very satisfactory. The crimes reported were of a very ordinary character. The only matter before them was the larceny of a donkey. The malicious injury cases reported were not of a very serious character. There were two cases of robbery of arms last year, and only one this year.

Mr. Justice Kenny, addressing the City Grand Jury, said that there were only two cases for their consideration. One was a charge of larceny of a cheque, and forgery in endorsing the cheque in the payee's name. In the other case the accused was charged with obtaining money by false pretences. As regards the general state of the city, he had been informed that for months past the city, from the police point of view, had been in a most orderly condition. That was highly satisfactory, when one considered the state of the country bordering on the County Waterford.

COUNTY LOUTH.

OUT-OF-WORK DONATION CASE.

The business of the Louth Summer Assizes was continued yesterday by Mr. Justice Gordon, in the Crown Court, and by Mr. Justice Pim in the Record Court.

Before Mr. Justice Gordon and a jury Robert Nugent and Anthony King, both of Drogheda, were charged with conspiring to defraud the Ministry of Labour on the 8th January last.

On opening the case, Mr. W. McGrath, K.C., said that Nugent was the local Secretary of the Drogheda National Union of Dock Labourers, a society approved under the Insurance Act. In order to obtain the out-of-work donation it was necessary to produce at the Labour Exchange a record card, showing the number of contributions under the Insurance Act. Nugent had issued to King, who was not a member of his society, a record card, for the purpose of enabling him to get the donation, but King had been detected before he got the money.

John McGoldrick, an official in the Exchange, said that when King came to him for the unemployment money, he was not satisfied, and he brought the accused to the manager.

Answering Mr. T. W. Brown, K.C., who appeared for King, the witness said that he could not state the number of people who had got this donation in Drogheda.

Mr. Brown—Would there have been 2,000 getting it? I don't know, but they had a fine time, anyway.

Maybe it would be easier for you to tell me the number of people in Drogheda who did not get it. Didn't they come in their motor cars and on their motor bicycles to get this out-of-wor kmoney? I didn't see any people in motor cars. (Laughter.)

Further evidence having been given on behalf of the prosecution, no evidence was called for the defnce.

In his address on behalf of King, Mr. Brown said that if his client had honestly believed that he was right in all he did—and apparently there were few people in Drogheda who did not think that they were entitled to this money—then he had committed no crime. He had merely tried to do what the whole countryside was doing, and because he had been too truthful to the officer he got nothing but his place in the dock.

Mr. Morgan Byrne, who (instructed by Mr. Tallan) appeared for Nugent, also addressed the jury.

Replying for the Crown, Mr. Cusack, K.C., asked were these people to get off because their swindle had been unsuccessful. It was a simple way of enabling the people of Drogheda to live without working, and an easy way for Nugent to make a living.

His lordship said that both the accused knew that the cards were not proper, and both knew that the idea was to attempt to get money for King to which he was not entitled. Nugent had described himself as a nervous and timid man. He was neither too nervous nor timid to take 2s. from every person who came to him for fradulent cards.

The jury, after five minutes' deliberation, found the accused not guilty, and they were discharged.

IRISH QUESTIONS.

LAND FOR SOLDIERS.

Mr. Henry, replying, in the House of Commons, to Major Newman, who asked whether any legislation to facilitate the settlement on the land in Ireland by Irishmen who fought as volunteers in the late war was to be introduced, said that the answer was in the affirmative.

RATHCLARIN OUTRAGE.

Mr. Stewart asked the Chief Secretary whether he could give the House any information with regard to the outrage at Rathclarin, Co. Cork, on 19th June, when a patrol of five soldiers and a constable were attacked by a large body of men; whether four of the soldiers were injured; whether their weapons and equipment were carried away by the assailants, and whether any arrests have been made.

Mr. Henry—A military patrol, consisting of one corporal and four privates of the Essex Regiment, accompanied by Constable Daniel McMorrow, of the Royal Irish Constabulary were attacked and disarmed at Rathclarin on the 19th of June. The patrol had been to Burren Pier, where timber had been thrown into the sea, and about half way home the party were attacked by 16 men disguised, who suddenly rushed upon the patrol from the end of a laneway. The soldiers were armed with rifles, bayonets, and ten rounds each of ball cartridge, but the constable was unarmed. After a short struggle the patrol was overpowered, disarmed, and tied together with ropes, the rifles, bayonets and ammunition being taken away. Three of the soldiers were wounded, but not seriously. Up to the present no arrest has been made.

IRISH SECONDARY SCHOOLS.

Mr. Lynn asked the Chief Secretary whether he was aware that the priority of treatment given to English and Scottish educational reform, with the consequent improved conditions of the English and Scottish teachers had resulted in Irish secondary schools losing many of their best teachers, and whether he would, without prejudice to the larger policy of educational reform, take steps to save Irish schools from the loss of these teachers consequent on the favoured treatment of Great Britain.

Mr. Henry—Representations in this sense have been made to the Chief Secretary. The bill, which, it is hoped, will place Irish teachers on as good a footing as the English and Scottish teachers, will be introduced shortly.

THE AIR AND THE LOAN.

A novel demonstration in connection with the Victory Loan will take place this afternoon in Dublin. At 5 o'clock there will be an imposing aeroplane display, when leaflets will be dropped from the air. They will afford a timely reminder that to-morrow is the last day for subscribing to the Victory Loan.

FRENCH MINERS RETURNING TO WORK.

A telegram from Paris, dated Thursday, says:—As the result of the Ministerial arbitration award, given yesterday, the miners of the centre and south coalfields have decided to return to work to-morrow.

SWEDISH SEAMEN'S STRIKE.

A Stockholm telegram, dated Wednesday, states:—The Arbitration Commission has succeeded in mediating between the Swedish Union and the Shipowners' Association. The seamen's strike will, therefore, come to an end, and work will probably be resumed in a few days.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

HOUSING IN RURAL DISTRICTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—A great deal is being said about the housing scheme for towns, but nothing about country districts, where houses are just as badly needed. A scheme was spoken of in Parliament vaguely for extending the labourers' cottages Act. That was a most useful measure, but the difficulty is to obtain suitable land. All over the country-side one can see good houses derelict and falling down. The reason of this is plain. A cottage with land comes on the market, and what happens? A neighbour who already has a house buys up the land, and allows the house to fall down. He could let it, but he will not part with a bit of land to go with it, and, of course, no one will take a house unless there is a bit of land for growing potatoes and somewhere to run fowls.

The old mud cottage, with mud floor, is not fit for human habitation: that is granted by all. I am now writing of districts where the land has not been bought out. The houses belong to the tenants, who are either too lazy or too poor, in many cases, to rebuild. I have known of several houses that have actually fallen on top of the unfortunate people lying in their beds. What is to be done? The landlord is sometimes willing to rebuild, out of charity, but how is he to accomplish this? His taxes are three or four times what they were before the war, his labour bill double at least, and probably he has a large place to keep up as best he can. If he has sold any of his property, he has not been paid for it probably, and he is lucky if he can keep his own roof in repair, let alone his tenants'.

The Government should start a scheme for helping people in country districts to re-build their houses. £1 5s. is to be given to the townsmen for every £1 they can produce, in order to assist them to build. Why should not the people in country districts also obtain this benefit? Building societies might be started to carry out the scheme. They should be able to buy the building materials at sale price, and employ the local builders to carry out the work. There is a great shortage of carpenters in country districts, and returned soldiers might well be trained for this work. Housing is largely a women's question, and I should like to see them interesting themselves in the matter. At present the water supply seems to be entirely disregarded, and cottages are often built at a great distance from well or stream.—Yours, etc.,

A. M. COOTE.

RENT AND RATES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—A tenant complains bitterly in to-day's issue of your paper that the inclusive rent system prevailing in Dublin, by concealing the amount of the real rent which he pays, may preclude him from getting the relief he is entitled to under the recent Rent Act. The real rent is under £52, while the inclusive rent is over that sum. The point raised is of public consequence, and should be settled. If it should be decided against the tenants, I am not sure that it would not be a case of poetic justice, since, until the shoe began to pinch, they had no scruples in letting the house-owner bear the burden of the variations in the rates to which he was liable under the inclusive rent system. This system is bad in every way, and should be abolished, the occupying tenant being made to pay the rates direct, so long as rates are assessed on house property. I think there can be little doubt that the Act had in view the English custom of direct payment of rates (except in the case of small property, with rent paid weekly or, perhaps, monthly), when fixing the sum of £52. I have written to Sir Maurice Dockrell on the subject. In Ireland Belfast seems to be the only exception to the inclusive rent system. In that city, in the case of the higher valuations, it is customary to pay the rates direct. In the case of the lower valuation it is customary for the landlord to pay the rates, the houses being "let free of rates," at appropriate rents.

But if the landlord should have no responsibility for the rates, the custom of taxing unoccupied houses, whole or in part, is neither logical nor equitable. Vacancy rates are charged in Dublin, and full rates in the Urban Districts of Rathmines and Pembroke on unoccupied houses, although house-owners in such cases would not have to pay income tax. In Manchester, Bradford, Birmingham (except in the case of "compounded" houses), Londonderry, Belfast, Rochdale rates are not exacted in such cases. In the City of London (although not in the rest of London) half of all rates except poor rates, are exacted. In York there are vacancy rates, where no "compounding" agreements have been entered into. In Limerick there are vacancy rates.

The legal aspect of the inclusive rent system, which has been for long a vexed question in Dublin, seems to have been settled in the affirmative by the judgment given in the recent Picton Bradshaw v. M'Mullan case. By this decision, apparently, it is legal for the tenant to enter into a contract with his landlord for the former to pay the rates under the inclusive rent system. In the interests of both parties, and the city generally, the relations of house-owners and tenants should be thrashed out and definite results reached. The world is getting too complicated to put up with sloppy methods, which may have suited our predecessors. The Dublin Citizens' Association would, no doubt, organise a public meeting for this purpose, if it were assured beforehand of support from those interested in the matter.—Yours, etc.,

HOWARD H. HELY, Secretary,
Dublin Citizens' Association.

IRISH PLOT-HOLDERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—While appreciating the Recorder's equitable and just remarks that the farce of supporting plot-holders out of the rates must cease, I deny Mr. Donnelly's statement, as Secretary of the Plot-holders' Union, that plot-holders have turned grass and derelict land into intensive culture without costing the ratepayers a penny. To prove this statement I ask him to publish a correct and true return of the income and expenditure of the Land Cultivation Committee, including the responsibility that Committee have undertaken in the Croydon Park scheme, showing, first, the actual rent paid by the plot-holders; second, the actual taxes assessed and paid on the land by them; third, the total cost incurred by the Corporation Committee in formulating and managing this scheme; fourth, the loss of rates incurred by injury to adjoining vacant property; to which should be added the loss sustained by occupiers in being ousted from holdings in which they had an interest, and which produced milk for one of the poorest districts of the city. They provided, in addition, healthy recreation and sports ground for the youth and residents of the city, and contributed full rates—not on one-fourth—on some twenty odd acres of land bearing one of the highest valuations as sports ground in the City of Dublin.

The Act was never intended to enable professional men, trade union members, and others to oust market-gardeners, dairymen, cattle-salesmen, schools and sports committees from property on which they had expended money and in which they had an interest—all to be wiped out to enable members of the Plot-holders' Union to acquire land at a fraction of its value and grow cabbages, etc., which, I understand, reached the absurd retail price of 6d. each from consumers. Nor was it ever intended that a temporary war emergency scheme should become a permanent fixture.—Yours, etc.,

T. PICTON BRADSHAW.

LADIES AND JUMPING COMPETITIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Why are the ladies excluded from the jumping competitions at our coming August Horse Show? Is it because we men are afraid of our sporting fair sex who have displayed such horsemanship at the various shows? I have not the slightest doubt that, if this were left to a vote of the public, the result would be, "Let them all come." The leaving open of only one competition for ladies is, to say the least of it, a Sinn Fein motto; so let us see that the powers that be in the Royal Dublin Society will rectify this.—Yours, etc.,

DEFECTIVE FRENCH SHELLS.

A Reuter Paris telegram, dated Wednesday, says:—As the result of the investigations which have been going on for some time, two brothers named Paulet have been arrested at Marseilles. Before the war they were the owners of a small workshop, and lived in a very modest way, but soon after the outbreak of war they became Government contractors, and were able to put up huge factories, turning out immense quantities of material, and undertaking large orders. Two months ago the Minister of the Interior received a complaint as to the manner in which the brothers Paulet had carried out their contracts with the Government. An investigation ensued, and as a result they were charged with allowing the manufacture of defective shells for the French and British Governments. The work was carried on in the factories day and night, and it is alleged that it was at night that copper of an indifferent quality was mixed with an alloy of other metals, and was not hammered in conformity with the instructions of the Ministry of Munitions. This doubled the output, but ruined the quality of the copper, which was used for making fuses for 75 MM shells. In carrying out a contract for shells for English 106 MM guns, instead of using new and specially prepared steel, old iron, which had already been used in the manufacture of reinforced concrete, is stated to have been employed. Since the brothers Paulet were mobilised, and were working for the National Defence, the military authorities have taken over the case. All the books and correspondence of the firm have been saved, and it is thought that an examination of these will lead to further arrests.

KINGSTOWN SPEED LIMIT CASE.

A QUESTION OF JURISDICTION.

The case of a soldier summoned for exceeding the speed limit, in which Major Ball last Thursday informed Mr. Lupton, K.C., that he had no jurisdiction under the Defence of the Realm Act, came up again at Kingstown Police Court yesterday.

James Adamson, private in the R.A.S.C., was summoned for driving a motor car at 35 miles an hour.

Mr. J. W. Davis, solicitor for the defence, said that Colonel Burton was now present on behalf of the military authorities, and, if his worship wished, he could hear him.

Mr. Lupton said that he did not wish to hear Colonel Burton. The military authorities had now done in this case only what he expected they would do, and he would say nothing further about it. Anything he had to say he said last week. He would impose a fine of 30s.

QUESTIONS IN PARLIAMENT.

In the House of Commons yesterday,

Mr. MacVeagh, for Mr. Seddon, asked the Chief Secretary for Ireland whether his attention had been drawn to a prosecution against a soldier at Kingstown for exceeding the speed limit, in the course of which Major Ball, an official of the Crown Solicitor's Office, stated that he was authorised by the Competent Military Authority to object to a civil tribunal trying the case under the Defence of the Realm Regulations, and refused to give any special reasons for making such a claim; and whether such a claim was recognised or approved by the Irish Government, and how many Irish officials are entitled to claim such immunity from the law.

Mr. Denis Henry (Attorney-General), who replied, referred the hon. member to an answer given on Wednesday on behalf of the Secretary of State for War to a similar question. He called attention to the fact that the Major who was referred to—Major Ball—was not an official of the Chief Crown Solicitor's Office, but of the War Office.

Mr. MacVeagh asked if he could say whether this claim was recognised as approved by the Irish Government, and that Irish officials were entitled to such immunity.

Mr. Henry—So far as that question is concerned, the claim is not recognised or approved by the Irish Law Officers, and, so far as I am concerned, no Irish official is entitled to claim such immunity.

Mr. MacVeagh asked how, if it was not approved by the Irish Law Officers, a claim of this kind for immunity for soldiers was recognised by any Irish Court acting under the authority of the Irish Government.

Mr. Henry—It was recognised in this instance by the Divisional Police Magistrate, who acts as judge.

Mr. MacVeagh—Can proceedings be taken to overrule that decision, seeing that the Law Officers think the decision is illegal?

Mr. Henry asked the hon. gentleman to wait until a person representing the War Office answered the question, and at the appropriate time he would see that steps were taken.

EXCESSIVE SPEED OF MOTORISTS.

At a meeting of the County Dublin County Council, held in Rutland square, Dublin, yesterday, a motion was passed directing the Secretary to draw the attention of the Inspector-General of the Royal Irish Constabulary and the Chief Commissioner of the Dublin Metropolitan Police to the excessive speed of motorists on county and urban roads, resulting in danger to the public and injury to the roads.

ROYAL HOSPITAL FOR INCURABLES.

The monthly meeting of the Committee of Management of the Royal Hospital for Incurables was held at the Hospital yesterday (Thursday) morning at 9.30 o'clock—Sir William Fry, D.L., J.P. (Chairman), presiding. Also present—Alfred G. Hollinshead, Esq., J.P., Hon. Treasurer; Orlando P. Beater, Esq., LL.D.; Francis Bewley, Esq.; F. C. Earle Bland, Esq.; A. Chisholm Cameron, Esq.; Right Rev. Monsignor J. J. Dunne, P.P., V.G.; W. Houghton Fry, Esq.; Ambrose Aliaga Kelly, Esq.; W. T. Keenan, Esq.; Henry J. Monahan, Esq., B.L.; Sir John R. PRODUCE MARKETS.

NEW YORK, THURSDAY.

WHEAT—Spot market nominal. Exporters engaged 200 boatloads of oats. Receipts—Atlantic, 106,000; last year, 29,000; clearances, 204,000; last year, 6,000.

FLOUR steady.

CORN on spot weak at 3½c. fall. Receipts—Atlantic, 301,000; last year, 5,000; clearances, nil; last year, nil.

LARD—Cash quiet; Prime Western 12½ and Middle West 10 points down.

COFFEE opened steady, 1 point to 3 points higher, and showed strength for a time, owing to steady Brazilian markets and buying by importers, New Orleans houses, and European operators. A sharp reaction followed, due to liquidation, and selling by commission and Wall street houses, the market closing easy, 25 to 34 points down. Spot firm, ¼c. up.

SUGAR—Spot steady.

COTTON opened firm, 48 to 54 points higher, and advanced for a while on firm cable advices, better Manchester news, foreign buying, trade purchases, covering of shorts, a better public demand, and New Orleans buying. Partial recessions took place later under realising and on Southern, Wall street and reactionary selling, the market closing steady, however, at 12 to 25 points gain on the day. Spot quiet, 10 points higher. New Orleans spot 88 points up. Receipts—Atlantic, 10,000; Gulf, 9,000. Exports—Britain, 18,000; Continent, 24,000.

CHICAGO, THURSDAY.

WHEAT on spot inanimate. Receipts—Western, 526,000, last year 925,000. No. 2 red winter, spot, nominal; No. 2 hard winter, spot, nominal.

CORN opened easy, 3c. to 3½c. lower, owing to the bearish Bureau report, favourable weather, and realising; but rallied on small stocks, smaller interior receipts, bull support, and stop-loss purchases. The declining movement was resumed subsequently under commission house selling, favourable crop reports, and bulls unloading. It is expected that there will be a resumption of trading in wheat at Winnipeg. The market closed easy, 1¼c. to 3¼c. down. Receipts—Western, 37,000, last year 731,000; this season 4,942,000, last season 758,000. July, 195; September, 193; December, 158.

OATS firm, 1⅛c. to ⅞c. higher. July, 75⅛; September, 76⅛; December, 76⅛.

PROVISIONS opened steady, and rates advanced with the higher hog prices, a better outside demand, in sympathy with grain, and on buying by commission houses. Partial recessions took place later under realising and a disappointing cash inquiry, the market closing irregular, with lard 12½ points down to 15 up, pork unchanged to 22½ higher, and ribs 5 points lower to unchanged. Lard—July, 36.00; September, 35.40. Pork—July, 53.80; September, 51.52½. Ribs—July, 28.35; September, 28.60.

BACON steady, 25 points down to unchanged. The receipts of hogs at 15 principal Western centres, including Chicago, since March 1st, total 1,122,000, against 11,766,000 for the corresponding season last year.

HOGS—Prices delayed. Receipts—Western, 90,000, last year 115,000; Chicago, 36,000, last year, 32,000.

ARABIAN DISPUTE.

A Cairo telegram, dated July 2, states:—Reuter's Agency learns that for a considerable time past there has existed between King Hussein of the Hedjaz and Ibn Sard (?), Emir of the Nijh (?) a dispute as to the ownership of the district of Kfurma, 160 miles north-east of Taif. Raids precipitated a collision between the rival armies. The Abdulla's force occupied the village of Taraba, but he was ejected on the night of June 25 by the tribesmen of Ibn Saud, who captured all their antagonists' guns and machine-guns, with their personnel. Ibn Saud is now returning to Reidh, the capital of Central Arabia. Operations have been suspended, and negotiations are proceeding.

ROWING.

LIMERICK REGATTA—YESTERDAY.

Limerick Regatta was held yesterday, and was favoured with fine weather. There was a large attendance, Southern rowing centres being well represented, and the several events provided close contests. Clonmel won the three principal events, while Cappoquin were successful in the Subscribers' Cup. Details:—

CLEEVE CUP (Junior Fours).—Limerick, 1; Athlunkard, 2; Cappoquin, 0; St. Michael's, 0. Won by a length and a half; same.

LADIES' PLATE (Senior Fours).—Clonmel, 1; St. Michael's, 2; Lee, 0; Cappoquin scratched. Won by a length and a quarter. Lee broke a strap at the start, and were out of the race, the issue being between the placed boats.

SUBSCRIBERS' CUP (Junior Eights).—Cappoquin, 1; Lee, 2; Shandon scratched. Won by a length.

LIMERICK CITY CUP (Senior Fours).—Clonmel, 1; Athlunkard, 2; Lee, 3; Shandon, 0; Cappoquin, 0; St. Michael's scratched. Won by a length; same.

THOMOND CHALLENGE CUP (Junior Fours).—Limerick and Athlunkard, dead heat; Cork, 3; Lee, 0; Shannon, 0; St. Michael's (A), 0; St. Michael's (B), 0; Shandon scratched.

MURPHY CUP (Junior Fours).—Cappoquin, 1; Cork, 2; Lee, 0; Shandon, 0. Won by two lengths.

SHANNON CUP (Senior Eights).—Clonmel, 1; Athlunkard, 2; Lee, 0; St. Michael's, 0; Cappoquin scratched. Won comfortably by a length.

QUIN CHALLENGE CUP (Junior Eights).—Athlunkard, 1; Lee, 2; St. Michael's (B), 0; Shandon, 0; St. Michael's (A), 0; Shannon, 0; Cork, 0; Limerick, 0. An objection was lodged on the ground of a foul, and the umpire, Mr. De Courcy, directed a re-row, all the crews to compete if they so wished. The re-row between Athlunkard and Limerick followed, and Athlunkard won by a length.

BANN REGATTA—YESTERDAY.

Favoured with excellent weather yesterday, this regatta proved a great success. From early morning the outlook was not too bright, but although the sky remained overcast, no rain fell. As usual, the attendance was a large one, and the thirteen races produced excellent contests. With the exception of Newry, all the Northern clubs were represented, while Dolphin made the journey from Dublin, a task which at the last moment Commercial found themselves unable to undertake. The Maiden Fours opened the proceedings, eight crews going up for the event, of which the home club supplied two. Both these came through their heats, and qualified to meet Derry in the final. The heats of Junior Eights produced the same crews for the final, two Bann and one Derry. In each case the home boats proved stronger than their opponents, the B Crew winning the fours and the A Crew the eights. The Magee Cup produced the best race of the day. All four boats got away together, and raced level for three-quarters of the distance. Then Derry assumed the lead, and drawing away to the finish won a good race from Bann. This was the one final that did not go to home crews, no less than six of the seven being carried off by the Coleraine colours.

KENNEDY CUP (Maiden Fours).

Heat A.—Bann B Crew, 1; Belfast Commercial, 0. Won by three lengths.

Heat B.—Derry, 1; Portadown, 2; Dolphin, 0. Won by two lengths; a length.

Heat C.—Bann A Crew, 1; Carrickfergus, 2; Drogheda, 0. Bann led from the start to win easily by three lengths; five lengths.

Final.—Bann B Crew, 1; Bann A Crew, 2; Derry, 0. A good race throughout between the Bann crews, B Crew going ahead passing the clubhouse to win by a length.

MAGEE CUP (Junior Fours.)

Final.—Derry, 1; Bann, 2; Drogheda, 3; Belfast Commercial, 0. Belfast had the best of a good start, with Derry close up. The four boats raced practically level for three-quarters of the course, when Derry drew ahead to win by a length and a half; two lengths.

UNDER-AGE FOURS.

Final.—Bann, 1; Dolphin, 2; Derry, 0. Won easily by five lengths.

BANN CUP (Senior Fours).

Final.—Bann, 1; Belfast Commercial, 2; Derry, 3; Portadown, scr. First away, Belfast led passing Somerset. Bann dozened, and closed the gap, and going ahead slowly, led to the finish to win by three lengths; same.

BRUCE CUP (Junior Eights).

Heat A.—Bann B Crew, 1; Portadown, 2; Dolphin, 3. Quicker away, Bann led throughout to win by three lengths.

Heat B.—Bann A Crew, 1; Drogheda, 0; Dublin Commercial, scr. Won easily by two lengths.

Heat C.—Derry, 1; Belfast Commercial, 0. Won easily.

Final.—Bann A Crew, 1; Derry, 2; Bann B Crew, 0. Won by three-quarters of a length.

COLERAIN CUP (Senior Eights).

Final.—Bann, 1; Derry, 0. Led all the way to win easily by a length.

SERVICE RACE.

Final.—Bann, 1; Carrickfergus, 0. Bann led from the start and won by a length.

CITY OF DERRY REGATTA—TO-DAY.

THE DRAW.

The draw for the City of Derry Regatta resulted as follows:—

Maidens.—Heat A—No. 1, Portadown; No. 2, Drogheda; No. 3, Bann. Heat B—No. 1, Carrickfergus; No. 2, Derry (No. 1 crew); No. 3, Belfast Commercial. Heat C—No. 1, Derry (No. 2 crew); No. 2, Derry (No. 3 crew). Final—No. 1, Winners of Heat C; No. 2, Winners of Heat B; No. 3, Winners of Heat A.

Junior Fours.—Heat A—No. 1, Bann; No. 2, Belfast Commercial. Heat B—No. 1, Derry; No. 2, Drogheda. Final—No. 1, Winners of Heat B; No. 2, Winners of Heat A.

Junior Eights.—Heat A—No. 1, Drogheda; No. 2, Derry; No. 3, Belfast Commercial. Heat B—No. 1, Portadown; No. 2, Bann. Final—No. 1, Winners of Heat B; No. 2, Winners of Heat A.

Senior Fours.—No. 1, Bann; No. 2, Derry.

Senior Eights.—No. 1, Derry; No. 2, Bann.

Service Race.—No. 1, Carrickfergus; No. 2, Derry; No. 3, Bann.

Ladies' Race.—Heat A—No. 1, No. 1 crew; No. 2, No. 3 crew. Final—No. 1, No. 3 crew; No. 2, Winners of Heat A.

The full reward of Victory cannot be realised so long as the vile serpent of debt thrown up by the war remains to threaten National credit and hamper industrial peace and development.

You can help to remove this incubus which is stifling our industries, creating social unrest, and causing high prices and unemployment, if you take your full share of the COST of Victory.

NEW MAGISTRATE FOR TYRONE.

The Lord Chancellor has appointed Captain George Evans, of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers, of Clogher, and Greenmount Lodge, Omagh, to the Commission of the Peace for the County of Tyrone. He will adjudicate at Omagh and Clogher. Early in the war Captain Evans joined the Trinity College O.T.C., and afterwards served with the 10th (Irish) Division in Salonika, Egypt, and France. Captain Evans is well known in Nationalist circles, and was one of the principal supporters of Mr. John Skeffington, the Nationalist candidate, in the last South Tyrone election.

THE POSSESSION OF ARMS AND AMMUNITION.

James O'Keeffe, civilian, was tried by district courtmartial at Ship street, Barracks, Dublin, on 4th July, 1919, and sentenced to one year and nine months' imprisonment, with hard labour, on charges under Reg. 9 A.A., Defence of the Realm Regulations, of being in possession of a shot-gun, ammunition (rifle and revolver cartridges and shot-gun cartridges loaded with bullets), and explosives (blasting powder and gelignite), without a permit. These articles were found by the police at Avondale House, Rathdrum, on 12th and 13th June. Accused was the caretaker, and the only person living in the house at the time. He was sentenced by the Petty Sessions Court at Ovoca on 17th June to three months' imprisonment, with hard labour, on a charge of unlawful assembly. The sentence of the courtmartial runs from the date of trial.

HIBERNIAN BIBLE SOCIETY.

The monthly meeting of the General Committee of the Hibernian Bible Society was held in the Bible House on Tuesday last. Present—Mr. M. O'Toole (presiding), Rev. J. C. Irwin, B.D.; Rev. D. H. Hall, B.D.; Mr. H. P. Goodbody, Mr. Richard Hinde, Mr. W. H. Fry, and Mr. Sidney Barton. Apologies for absence were received from—The Rev. W. R. Budd, Rev. John Oliver, M.A.; Rev. Chancellor Hemphill, Mr. T. W. T. Duke, Mr. Thomas Tallant, I.S.O., and Mr. W. H. McLaughlin, D.L. The Rev. F. Cecil Long, M.A., was in attendance.

A letter of sympathy was sent to Mr. H. D. Vaughan on the death of his father.

It was resolved—"That the Committee of the Hibernian Bible Society desire to place on record the expression of their deepest gratitude to God Almighty that the Peace Treaty was signed on June 28th, and they most earnestly pray that this 'peace with victory' will be used by the nations of the earth to the glory of God and the benefit of the human family."

The Committee acknowledge, with thanks, the receipt of £10, the legacy of Mr. J. Hayes, per Messrs. Bridge and Bridge, Roscrea.

The report of the Deputation Secretary for June showed that 20 sermons had been preached and one meeting addressed. Applications for grants were considered, and 3,492 Bibles, Testaments, and portions were granted free, and at reduced prices, for schools, prisons, colportage sale, soldiers, etc. Cheques were drawn to pay accounts as audited, and a contribution of £300 was forwarded to the British and Foreign Bible Society. There will be no meeting of the Committee during August. Contributions for the work at home and abroad are earnestly solicited, and will be gratefully received at 10 Upper Sackville street, Dublin.

MESSRS. BATTERSBY'S SALES.

There was a very large attendance yesterday at Messrs. Battersby's auction rooms, when several attractive lots were put up to competition. The bidding for the first few lots was considered insufficient, and the properties were withdrawn for sale by private treaty, but subsequently matters assumed a much more animated aspect, and the following properties were disposed of at advantageous prices:—112 St. Lawrence road, for £550; 5 Palmerston road, £850; profit rent, 91 Harcourt street, £400; 124 Lower Baggot street, £420; 49 Abbey street, £575; 30, 31 Elfra road, £825; Breffni, Baldoyle, £400. Interest in Nos. 1 and 2 Frescati was also sold. The total of the day's sale was £4,470, the purchasers paying 5 per cent. commission in all cases.

THE CORK CITY REGATTA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In your issue of the 5th inst. the following paragraph appeared:—"A solution to the difficulties attending this fixture appears to have been found, and it is understood that Cork Boat Club have taken up the running of the meeting, which will be held on the 9th inst., as previously arranged. Instead of the usual course, boats will start up-stream and row down, finishing in front of the clubhouse." This paragraph has been brought under the notice of our Committee, and they request us to point out that the statement contained therein is inaccurate. A solution of the difficulty has not been found, and Cork Boat Club have not taken up "the running of the meeting." Our fixture has been definitely abandoned for this year, and our Committee is in no way identified with the proposed Blackrock Regatta, nor will our cups be competed for at that fixture. In asking you to give publicity to this contradiction, our Committee are actuated solely by the desire to remove the possibility of the above paragraph being interpreted as an attempt on our part to deceive the public by calling the fixture Cork Boat Club Regatta instead of Cork City Regatta.—Yours, etc.,

STORE CATTLE SALES.

GANLY, SONS AND CO.—Limited entries were shown at this week's sale, for which there was a very keen demand at recent prices. A very forward lot of three year old shorthorn bullocks at £36 10/- were 80/- per cwt. A pen of exceptionally choice A.A. cross heifers consigned from Sir Walter Nugent, Bart., at £28 15/- made nearly 84/- per cwt. There were another lot of exceptional merit, but useful cattle, from £28 to £33, were about 71/- to 77/- per cwt.

MESSRS. GAVIN LOW, LTD.—Supplies were much smaller, barely reaching 500 head. There was a good attendance of buyers, but trade was rather slow, and although a number of lots were passed through the ring, they subsequently changed hands, and a clearance was effected. Hereford crosses made £26 (77/-), A.A. crosses, £27 5/- (78/4), £24 (72/-), £23 (73/-); heifers (71/-); shorthorn heifers, £35 5/- (80/-); £33 15/- (75/-); polly bullocks, £33 (75/-); horned bullocks, £31 15/- (73/-), £26 15/- (75/-), £30 10/- (76/-), £30 (71/6), £26 10/-.

R. AND J. WILKINSON.—Entries were still further curtailed this week, and, buyers being more numerous, we had a good demand for all classes of cattle at prices similar to those ruling last week, a greater proportion than of late being purchased for across-Channel, shippers being well represented. Best lots of bullocks, £39 15/- (77/6), £37 10/- (77/6), £36 (76/-), £34 15/- (75/-), £32 5/- (75/-), £31 10/- (74/-); heifers at £34 15/-, £34, £31, £30 15/-, and £30 12/6; bonds from 75/- to 78/6.

MESSRS. L. CUFFE AND SONS.—With the prospect not very good, the number of beasts forwarded to this sale was again limited, and, with buyers now getting pretty scarce, not much business resulted. Some few sales taking place to local and Northern farmers. Prices running much the same as last week, namely, 72/- to 76/-, with an exceptional lot to 78/-. We want more again for this trade. Usual weekly sale next Thursday at 11.30.

FINANCIAL NEWS

DUBLIN STOCK EXCHANGE.

IMPERIAL TOBACCO, COATS, AND DUNLOP RUBBERS HIGHER.

There was again a good deal of interesting attention given to the Stock and Share Markets yesterday, though the general volume of dealing was small, and considerable fluctuations were registered. Favourable changes include an advance in Bank of Ireland Stock on the dividend statement, a rise in Imperial Tobacco, Coats, and Dunlop Rubber Ord. Shares, with adverse movements in City of Dublin Steam, Mexican Eagle Oils, and Dublin United Tramway Ord. The Funds were busy and higher on balance. Munster and Leinster Bank Shares were neglected, but firm. Guinness opened lower, but the Ord. recovered. Rails were idle, with Midland Great Western 4 p.c. Debs. recovering. Sellers were about for Drapery Shares, and Marconi Shares were less firm.

In the Funds, War Loan 5 p.c. repeated 93¾. India 3½ p.c. recovered ¼ to 64¼, the 3 p.c. Stock ¼ to 55¼, but Consols fell ⅛ to 52 5/16.

Banks were quiet. Bank Stock rose ¼ to 220, but Nationals fell ¼ to 20¼. Hibernians were firm about 6¾-⅞.

In Breweries, Guinness alone quoted. The Ord. opened ⅛ lower at 38⅞, but rallied to 39 later, while the Pref. fell ⅛ further to 11⅛.

In Steam, City of Dublin Stock fell yet another 5 to 225.

As regards Marconis, the Ord. fell 1s. 3d. to 72s. 9d., and Americans 7½d. to 30s. 4½d., but Canadians rose 3d. to 17s. 6d., and Spanish fell 1s. to 15s.

In Home Rails, Dublin and South-Eastern repeated 34¼, but Midland Great Western 4 p.c. Debs. recovered 2 to 68¼.

Among Tramways, Dublin United fell ⅛ to 8⅛, while the Pref. show no recovery at 10¼.

In Dunlops, Parent Tyres were neglected, but Dunlop Rubber Ord. recovered 3s. to 160s., and also changed hands earlier at 158s. 9d.

In Drapery Shares, McBirneys fell 3s. 9d. to 6s. 3d. nominally, and Arnott Ord. ¼ to 6⅛.

As regards Manufacturing Shares, Coats Ord. rose ¼ to 8¼, but Dyers fell 6d. to 43s., while Cotton Ord. repeated 90s. Calico Printers marked 18s. 4½d., and Lever "A" Pref. 19s. 9d.

Among other business done, Imperial Tobacco opened [illegible] and steadily improved to 99s. on [illegible]. Mexican Eagle Oils fell 5s. to [illegible] 6d., while Kern River Oils realised [illegible] and later 22s. 6d. Shell Transports changed hands at 8¼, and Furness Withy fell to 5⅛.

The Official List was not issued owing to the printers' strike.

LONDON STOCKS HOPEFUL.

EFFECT OF THE RISE IN COAL PRICES.

The general appearance of the Stock Exchange was regular, but underlying conditions were [illegible] though the rush of subscriptions for the Loan was again heavy. Special market [illegible] was taken in the big increase to 672¼ [illegible] in cheque clearances for the past week, which was mainly attributed to the influx of capital for the Loan. Features among general markets were rather few. The announcement of a rise in coal prices in the immediate future [illegible] in the Home Railway and Industrial departments, but the action of the Government in making the exact cost of the wage and [illegible] concessions to the miners clear to the country at large was thoroughly approved. Gilt-edged [illegible] were checkered. War Fives, at 93 15/16, were [illegible]. The other War Loans closed unchanged, [illegible] Consols receded ⅛ to 52⅛. Miscellaneous gilt-edged [illegible] ruled steady to dull, without much [illegible], and prices, as a rule, kept close around [illegible] levels.

Changes.—Falls—Consols, ⅛ to 52⅛; 5 p.c. War Loan, ⅛ to 93 15/16.

FOREIGN BONDS QUIET.—The Foreign market was quiet and checkered. French Loans again [illegible] liquidation, the Fives closing with a fall of [illegible] while the Fours were back to 62½. Other [illegible] Bonds were on the dull side, Japanese and [illegible] descriptions being disposed to move [illegible] holders. Russians were also heavy. The [illegible] at 52, shed another point. Egyptian Loans, on the other hand, displayed rather more stability. Among South Americans, Peruvians were harder, [illegible] was finally ⅛ better at 6⅛. The [illegible] marked no net change. Brazilians were [illegible].

Changes.—Rise—Peruvian Corp., ⅛ to 6⅛. Falls—French Loan, ½ to 76½; Italian Rentes, 1 to 54½; French Fives, 1 to 82.

HOME RAILS DEPRESSED.—Home Rails displayed heaviness on the sharp rise in coal prices [illegible] in Parliament, and the news of the [illegible] of the threatened strikes on the Great [illegible] and Caledonian lines, which came to [illegible] towards the close of business, failed to [illegible] any very perceptible counteractive influence. Among Trunk and Trade Stocks North [illegible] gave way a full point to 90½, and there were some other falls of ½ to ⅛. Leeds Stock, however, exceptionally rose ½ to 62½. Passenger [illegible], though dull, showed better resistance. [illegible] Stocks hung fire, and presented a steady to dull appearance.

CANADIANS BETTER, AND MEXICANS QUIET.—Canadian Pacifics, reflecting the movement in Wall street, were marked up very sharply to 186, but Grand Trunks remained on the dull side. Mexican Rails were lacking in firmness around previous levels, while the decline in Argentine Rails made further progress, many net losses of ½ to 1 being shown on balance. San Paulos drooped to 168.

INDUSTRIALS DULL.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

The gloomy prospects opened up by the impending rise in the price of coal, which must have a detrimental effect on many important industries, had a direct bearing upon the Miscellaneous market yesterday. Among the shares affected were Cements, the Iron and Steel group, Gas Stocks, and a few Electric Lighting issues. For the same reason [illegible] were easier in places, Cunards, Withy, and P. and O. all finishing at lower levels. The Insurance section retained a heavy appearance, though a [illegible] of small gains mingled with declines. [illegible] improved on the dividend, and, with [illegible] of Canadian-American stocks coming over from the other side, quotations here were [illegible] better where altered. Marconis looked a [illegible] harder for choice, and British Oil Cakes were [illegible], but the best feature was again furnished by Imperial Tobacco, which scored a new record in [illegible] at £5, having changed hands at a slightly [illegible] figure. British-American Tobaccos also were [illegible] spot. Courtaulds and Listers were both [illegible] on the day, but above the worst; and Breads were dull; whereas Maypoles kept firm, with an [illegible] trading around the overnight price.

MINING SHARES.

LOW-PRICED KAFFIRS IN DEMAND.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

While official notification concerning the arrangements made for the gold producers of the Empire to dispose of their gold in the best markets has not been published, the belief that all is well in this connection was very prevalent yesterday, and it was even said that a meeting had been held at the Bank of England to put the finishing touches to the scheme. According to dealers, the [illegible] representatives did not by any means [illegible] a smooth path with the Governor of the Bank. The idea seems to be that the Bank is [illegible] all the negotiating. If rumour should prove correct, the companies should derive more or less substantial benefits. Certainly Kaffirs were inquired for on this impression, and dealings were on a larger scale than Wednesday could boast. [illegible] were mainly confined to the lower [illegible] descriptions. Among South Africans these [illegible] will, naturally, benefit, but so will the [illegible] and richer companies, for the advantages [illegible] are in respect of gold produced. There was an almost general advance in what are [illegible] "Cheap Kaffirs" and Finance Shares, as [illegible] simultaneously came in for attention. Some [illegible] deals were reported. In one or two cases [illegible] and they had unfilled orders. The tendency [illegible] the Rhodesian market was less strong, and [illegible] was not so brisk, with the result that at the close irregularity prevailed. It is argued, of [illegible] that advantages will also accrue to Rhodesian companies in regard to realisation of gold. [illegible] every advance Chartered met the opposition of sellers, and yesterday the shares gave way to a small extent, though the enthusiasm of [illegible] supporters shows no sign of waning. Diamond [illegible] took a breather, and for once in a way De Beers failed to take an upward step. [illegible] transactions were spread over the list, but [illegible] were not of sufficient importance to change [illegible]. Irregularity characterised Tin Shares. [illegible] business was passing in the early hours, as [illegible] had swung round to Kaffirs. Later, however, support was given to a few favourites, and the effect of raising them slightly. At the [illegible] realisations left their mark upon the list, as [illegible] while here and there new buying counter[illegible] the selling. Life was by no means absent [illegible] West African Gold Shares, even if the transactions undertaken did not show in the final prices. The real feature was again Prestea Block A, with, however, Gold Coast Amalgamated a good second. Buyers of Amalgamated Zinc continued their operations, and lifted the price substantially. Apart from this "star," nothing could be said in favour of Australians. Labour troubles are now so acute in certain directions that the Newcastle Steelworks of the Broken Hill Proprietary Company have had to shut down. There was again a fair amount of nibbling at Copper Shares, and further advances took place. Russians lacked life, and as regards the Miscellaneous list, the sustained rise in Bawdwin and Burma proved too much for certain speculators, who conceived it to their benefit to secure handsome profits. Santas made the best exhibit among Americans.

OILS IRREGULAR.

OWING TO PROFIT-TAKING.

BUSINESS ON A REDUCED SCALE.

(FROM THE FINANCIAL NEWS OF TO-DAY.)

Rather less animation was observable in the Oil Share market yesterday, and, after a firm opening at about the overnight levels, the leaders and other favourites became reactionary under profit-taking, which was followed by a recovery. Final prices showed some irregularity, but movements generally were not of much importance. Among the leaders, Shells moved between 8 3/16 and 8¼, closing at the latter price, an improvement of 1/16. Shells will be quoted ex the dividend of 5/- to-day. Mexican Eagles, which rose at one time to 8 15/16, and fell back on profit-taking to 8 13/16, were last quoted at 8 11/16, a loss of ¼ on balance, while the Prefs. moved down ¼ to 8½. Eagle Oil Transport Pref. recovered 1/16 to 5 1/16. Burmahs remained a firm market at 12 7/16. British Burmahs gave way at one time to 2, but hardened to the overnight level of 2⅛, while British Borneos improved 1/16 to 1 15/16. Assam Oils further declined 1/16 to 1 15/16. Anglo-Egyptian B, after a firm opening, fell to 5 15/16, but Venezuelan Oil Concessions recovered 1/16 to 4 5/16, and Lobitos remained at 4 5/16. Kern Rivers receded on profit-taking, a decline of 1/- being recorded at 21/9. Further sales of English Oilfields were responsible for a fall of 1/16 to 2 11/16. Trinidad issues remained dull, Trinidad Centrals losing 1/16 at 2 1/16 and Trinidad Oilfields 6d. at 18/6. Oil Trusts again met with a fair business, the price being advanced 6d. to 3/6. Among Russians, Spies came into demand in the afternoon on rumours of favourable news from the property, and rose 6d. to 14/-, and Ural Caspians recovered ⅛ to 2⅜; but Chelekens declined 6d. to 14/-, and New Grosny also lost 6d. at 8/6. Suvoroff Taman fell 6d. to 13/6. Closing prices:—

RUBBER SHARES STEADY.—The price of rubber is a little higher on balance at 1/9⅞ per lb. The great activity in Oils has attracted so much attention during the past week that Rubber Shares have had to take a back seat. Dulness and neglect ruled in the share market during the first few days of the week, and prices were inclined to crumble away, but a distinctly firmer tone developed yesterday, and although no great amount of business has been put through, quotations of the leading issues have fully recovered to the levels of last Thursday. Thus, Anglo-Dutch at 50/-, Java Investment at 39/3, and Rubber Trust at 35/9, are all a trifle higher on the week, while Vallambrosa are 9d. up at 21/9. Bajoe Kidoel are 55/- bid, and Bukit Kajang have gained 1/16 at 72/6. Java United are steady at 28/6, and Java Para have improved to 38/-. Johore Lands, after dipping 1/-, have recovered to 32/6; K.M.S. are also better at 30/-, and Kuala Selangor have spurted to 25/6 upon the announcement that reserves will be capitalised, giving the shareholders a bonus of one share at par for every two shares now held. Langen Java have fallen back to 42/6, and Mooply Valley are also lower at 46/6, while Malayalam have eased to 40/-. In the florin section, Anglo-Java are down 3d. at 6/-, and Bikam are a trifle lower at 4/4½. Kawie Java are wanted at 8/4½. London Asiatic are 10/6 bid, and Merbau have hardened a little at 3/11 bid. Sungkai Chumor are better at 12/9, but Straits Bertam have weakened to 7/-. Waverley have been active at rather lower prices, but have now recovered to 6/7½ buyers. Bukit Tambun (Coconuts) have been changing hands between 2/7½ and 2/8½. In the Borneo section very little business has been in progress, and a dull tone has prevailed. Lok Kawi have changed hands around 22/-, and Manchester N.B. around 31/-. Sablas are also lower at 20/6, but Tenom keep in demand between 50/- and 51/-.

THE MONEY MARKET.

Bank Rate (changed April 5th, 1917) ......5 p.c.

There was no alteration in the Bank rate. Supplies of money in the Loan Market were as superabundant as ever, the Bank return indicating that market balances had grown by over 36 millions during the week. Call money was quoted 2¼ to 2½ p.c. while renewals were being effected, but balances offered at 2¼ p.c. and less. Weekly loans were in limited request at 2¾ to 3¼ p.c. Over a million and a half was disbursed in dividends, chiefly upon Burmah Oil Shares. Discounts, despite the plethora of cash, ruled rather steadier, takers adopting the view that when the Loan lists were closed at the end of the week conditions would stiffen up. Bills were still scarce. Short paper was taken at 2⅞ p.c., three months' at 3 to 3⅛ p.c., and six months' at 3¼ p.c.

Silver further fell 1/16d. to 53⅜d. spot and 53⅜d. forward per oz.

On 'Change, rates on France, Holland, Spain, Portugal, and Rio de Janeiro moved against this country. Belgian, Italian, Danish, Norwegian, and New York currencies depreciated in value.

ARGENTINE ESTATES OF BOVRIL.

NATIONAL ECONOMY IN PURCHASE OF HIDES.

Presiding yesterday at the general meeting of the Argentine Estates of Bovril, Limited, Mr. George Lawson Johnston (Chairman), in moving the adoption of the report and accounts, said the figures in the profit and loss account under "balance of sales account: profits on sales of stores, etc."—£1,588,911—showed an improvement of £278,757 on those of 1917. The most important sales were to Government departments, the largest contract being for the sale of "Stelna" corned beef to the Ministry of Food. Their estate, farming, and factory profits were all included in the net profit of £91,683, so that the profits on Government contracts could not be considered as anything but modest. The total balance to the credit of profit and loss account, after adding the sum brought in from the previous accounts, was £123,692, or some £21,764 more than in 1917.

Now that they were free from the hindrances and restrictions that were inseparable from war conditions, he anticipated further improvement in the business, and he would be surprised if this year did not show still more satisfactory results. As a worker in a Government department he was responsible to some extent for their not receiving higher prices for hides during the last two years. Hides in large quantities were necessary to meet military requirements for leather, and it might surprise them to learn that the Government costs were kept close to pre-war prices at a time when many raw materials showed big war advances.

WAR OFFICE'S PURCHASE OF HIDES.

As regards hides produced within the Empire, those, in most instances, were kept down in price by some form of requisition; but in the case of free markets, such as existed in South America, it was a more difficult matter to make sure of large quantities of hides of the frigorific and best saladero types at reasonable prices.

These hides were essential to meet the military requirements in regard to soles for Army boots, and were only obtainable in the requisite quantities from the River Plate. During the last two years of the war full supplies were obtainable by arrangement with certain of the packing houses controlled from England, and at prices altogether below actual world values. In 1917, as an official of the Directorate of Raw Materials (War Office), he (the Chairman) worked out a scheme so as to include all the packing houses in Argentine and Uruguay. His method eliminated competitive buying by dividing the River Plate hide outputs between the Allies—for example, the purchases made for British tanneries came from certain allotted packing houses, whilst the United States tanners only purchased from others. This scheme facilitated the retention of the prices for hides at very little above pre-war value.

MILLIONS SAVED.

For instance, the f.o.b. Buenos Aires price of frigorific hides in January-July, 1914, was only about 23 per cent. less than the prices fixed during the last four months of the war, whilst in the case of the Argentine saladero hides the difference was even less. Since these arrangements came to an end there had been a very rapid rise in prices, the South American hide being now over twice the pre-war value. Had the present prices been paid instead of the arranged prices, say, from July last till the armistice in November, the cost of the British Army requirements of River Plate hides alone would have been over £250,000 more per month, whilst the extra cost for a year would have run into millions. This was one of the many economies that took place under the Surveyor-General of Supply, Lord Inverforth, at the War Office. Such economies did not come to public notice, because, being based on an absence of expenditure, they did not show in accounts at all. It was, he thought, well that such successes should not be altogether concealed, especially from those overseas, as otherwise, hearing only of rumours of extravagances, the world might think that this nation had lost its business acumen.

PATRIOTIC ACTION OF ARGENTINE COMPANIES.

He had given them some indication of how these low prices for hides were arranged. The scheme, however, could not have been carried out without the good-will of the packing houses concerned, and he should like to take this opportunity of paying a tribute to the patriotic action of a section of the River Plate packing houses. As he stated, they accepted less than the world's value for their hides, with a view to reducing the cost of British Army boots, and he asked for their approval of that somewhat altruistic attitude, not only as their Chairman, but as the largest individual shareholder. They were, no doubt, aware that he was somewhat identified with the avoidance of profiteering in any shape whatever, as exemplified in the case of your associated company, Bovril, Ltd., which did not raise the price of Bovril throughout the war, though a very large profiteering profit could in that case have been obtained without difficulty. He was satisfied that this policy left their company, as well as Bovril, Ltd., more able, because more worthy, to develop in the future, being based, as it was, on the foundation of public confidence. He was very far from regretting that this policy in all matters had left him poorer than he was before the war. They would have seen a good deal in the papers about strikes and labour troubles in South America, but he made bold to say the unsettlement consequent thereon, except, perhaps, in the case of the Buenos Aires port strike, had not been greater than was experienced in this country. At any rate, they would be very pleased to hear (and it was much to the credit of the management of the factories) that there had been no strike of any kind either on the estates or factories.

The report was unanimously adopted.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

With the ratification of peace, a new elasticity should be afforded to Stock Exchange business through the release of various mechanical restrictions that have hampered business and increased routine work during the war. Clients will soon be able to dispense with the now familiar yellow forms which they are called upon to sign every time they effect a sale. Endorsements of transfers on backs of the deeds will be obsolete before long. The accompaniment of multi-coloured forms to bonds, stock, receipts, and transfer deeds will not be insisted upon much longer. Such things, small in themselves, multiplied the amount of detail work in Stock Exchange offices to a surprising and harassing degree. The Stock Exchanges of the whole country will be thankful to be released from these war precautions.

It is reported that one of our largest shipping companies is contemplating the conversion of the whole of its engines for the use of oil as fuel, and that the Mexican Eagle Company has secured a contract for the supplying of the oil for 25 years. The Evening Standard gives publicity to the report with all due reserve.

The recent sharp advance in money rates in the United States is accounted for by the fact that New York is facing just now an unusual series of demands. There is a huge harvest that will have to be financed at inflated values. General business promises to be active as a result of unprecedented farm profits. Peace will stimulate many lines of industry. The United States Government will continue to be the largest single factor in the Money market for some time to come, and while its necessities are on the wane, they will, nevertheless, tend to stiffen rates.

The Ramsey Steamship Company, of Cardiff, will, as already announced, shortly make a capital issue. The company intend to purchase several first-class modern steamships, which will be employed in remunerative trades. The financial arrangements of the company will, we understand, provide for adequate working capital. The managers of the undertaking are Messrs. Instone and Co., Ltd., of Cardiff, London, Swansea, Newcastle-on-Tyne, etc., who have acquired a substantial holding in the company on the same terms as those upon which the public will be invited to subscribe. The managers estimate that the company will start with a profit, after [illegible] for depreciation, [illegible] sufficient to pay dividends of 10 [illegible] income tax. The prospectus will be available on Monday.

The gravity of the coal position is fully grasped on the Stock Exchange, where for several days the shares of [illegible] have been under a cloud. The decline, particularly in Iron and Steel Shares, has been steady, and the increase in the price of coal has accentuated the depression. All Gas Stocks, too, have been falling, but the enhanced cost of coal will now affect a very much wider range of industrial concerns, and, consequently, the markets are in anything but a happy frame of mind.

There is talk in the market of the distribution of share bonuses by some of the leading tea companies, two concerns specially mentioned in this connection being the Bargang and the Attaree Khat Companies. The Lungla Tea Company, it will be remembered, recently made an issue of one bonus share for every existing share.

The Golden Sands are running out!

THE golden sands of opportunity are running out. To-morrow night your right to subscribe for the Victory Loan will be finally withdrawn. Do not delay the investment which you intend making. Do not take the risk of leaving it till the last moment.

For consider what you are offered:—

A yield of £4 14s. 1d. per cent. from Victory Bonds, and of FIVE per cent. from Funding Loan.

MARKET REPORTS.

CATTLE.—DUBLIN METROPOLITAN, North Circular road, Thursday.—To-day's live stock supplies registered a further similar moderate expansion to last week. However, but for some interference and hold up of numerous drafts en route for market on Co. Meath the scattering of stock in a few cases in the Co. Dublin roads by malcontented farm hands or strikers, and also offerings promised to be of a substantially increased character. The better steamer accommodation and freer facilities for embarking stock imbued exporters with more confidence, and this eventuated in a speedier sell up of the beast and lamb divisions, but sheep again experienced a slow and irregular trade. Shippers, all the same, are still obliged to operate inside a safe margin to fit the value situation at the other side. It is said, too, that grading is being stringently conducted, and classification more uncertain, and consequently necessitating caution in selections here. Cattle were the turn firmer. Sheep bumping heavily on previous uncertain basis of values, but scarcely cheaper. Lambs a very active trade at previous tip-top rates.

Numbers on Sale.

	This week as compared with last			Corresponding weeks of 1918	1917
Cattle	2,785	Increase	99	2,949	3,828
Sheep and lambs	9,963	Increase	475	11,885	14,611
Veal calves	4	Increase	2	1	4

The beast trade at commencement showed rather doubtful prospects, but almost immediately warmed up into activity. Values on the whole worked out on a firmer and more uniform basis than previously, especially in the tip-top zone of things. Notwithstanding, too, that in point of quality the gathering of cattle was of ordinary description practically all were readily disposed of. Nothing sold relatively so well as nice quality beef cows. Choice steers and heifers scaled 84/- to 85/- and 86/- per cwt. in leading home trade selections, and good medium classes 78/- to 84/- per cwt., live. An occasional fancy beast fetched 87/6 to 88/6, or perhaps 90/- in rare cases. Commoner and lean cattle anywhere from 70/- to 77/6, choice fat cows 72/6 to 76/-, and young sorts around 80/- per cwt.; other classes of butchering cows, 65/- to 70/-, according to age, condition, etc.

Sheep experienced a very similar trade to last week, being slow and irregular to place, but values cannot be written actually lower, in view of the tenacity of owners. But this resulted in some carry-over of unsold lots. In fact, dealers' drafts are generally difficult to realise here at a profit, or, indeed, at what they cost in the country. Those on the storish side of condition appear to be selling readily in the provinces fully 10/- above their value here or on any other leading distributing market. Choice wether mutton, 1/4 to 1/5 and 1/6 per lb. Best ewes, 1/2 to 1/4½, and coarse and wasty sheep, 1/- to 1/1½ per lb. Choice heavy lambs, 76/- to 82/- and 84/-; extra selections, 85/- and 86/-. Ordinary drafts, 54/- to 75/-; small, etc., 34/- to 52/- each. Veal calves averaged 1/2 to 1/4 per lb.

DUBLIN STORE, North Circular road, Thursday.—There was a palpable decrease in the aggregate supply of store beasts forward for to-day's several auction [illegible] [illegible] last day, could scarcely be sold better than £5 to £5 15/- each this week.

GANLY, SONS AND CO.'S DUBLIN CATTLE MARKET REPORT, Thursday, 10th July, 1919. Offices and Wool Stores, 18, 19, and 20 Usher's quay.—The market opened with a slow and hesitating bidding for cattle, but later on the demand improved, and a good clearance was effected, the reduced quotations of last week ruling the majority of transactions. Livelier trade for sheep and lambs at improved prices. Dipping certificates now required with consignments. Store Cattle Auction every Thursday in our Paddocks, 63 Prussia street, commencing at 11 o'clock; entries invited. Wool—Next Auction Wednesday, July 30th. Consignments may now be sent on. Telephone No. 216. Telegrams, "Ganly, Usher's quay, Dublin."—(Advt.)

GAVIN LOW LTD., 50 Prussia street, Dublin. Market Report, Thursday, 10th July, 1919.—Supplies:—Cattle, 2,785—increase, 99; sheep, 9,963—increase, 475. There was a good selling trade for cattle, and an early clearance was effected, but prices were slightly lower. Sheep and lambs met a similar trade to last week. Good lambs realised very high prices. Quotations:—Best bullocks and heifers from 83/- to 86/- per cwt., live weight; others from 70/- to 82/- per cwt., live weight; cows from 40/- to 80/- per cwt., live weight; mutton, 1/3 to 1/7 per lb.; lambs 42/- to 82/-. N.B.—Sheep and lambs exposed for sale must be accompanied by a declaration that they have been dipped since 31st May. Fixtures:—Wednesday, July 16th—Auction of 60 Welsh Ponies at 50 Prussia st., Dublin. Wednesday, July 23—Important Sale of Harvesting Machinery, Steam Waggons, Farming Implements, etc., at 50 Prussia street, Dublin. Store Cattle Sale every Thursday.—(Advt.)

R. AND J. WILKINSON'S CATTLE MARKET REPORT, Thursday, 10th July, 1919.—Very little alteration in the supply of cattle; demand good at last week's prices, with an early clearance. Sheep trade also good; and best lambs somewhat dearer. Best cattle, 81/- to 85/-; others, 65/- to 80/- per cwt.; mutton, 1/2 to 1/6 per lb.; lambs, 40/- to 86/- each. Beasts, 2,785—increase, 99; sheep, 9,963—increase, 475.—(Advt.)

LAURENCE CUFFE AND SONS' REPORT, 4 Smithfield, Dublin, July 10th.—There was very little feature of change in to-day's market. Lambs were again a shade dearer, but other classes of stock were all cleared out fairly early at last week's rates. Store cattle getting harder to sell each week, and we will probably have a quiet time for some weeks. Fat cattle, 60/- to 85/- per cwt.; store cattle, 70/- to 80/- per cwt.; mutton, 1/- to 1/7 per lb.; lambs, 45/- to 90/- each. N.B.—Store Cattle Sale every Thursday, 11.30 o'clock.—(Advt.)

SMITH, GRIFFIN, AND CO., 56 and 57 Prussia street, Dublin, July 10th.—We had an increase of 99 cattle and over 400 sheep and lambs at to-day's market. Beef in good demand at about late rates. Sheep suiting home victuallers a steady trade, rough classes made irregular prices. Good fat lambs dearer. Quotations:—Beef, 80/- to 150/-, or 70/- to 83/-, and extra finish, 84/- to 85/- per cwt., live weight; mutton, 1/2 to 1/6 per lb.; lambs, 48/- to 90/- each. Declaration of dipping required with all consignments of sheep and lambs.—(Advt.)

DUFFEY, MANGAN, AND BUTLER, Cattle Salesmen, 37 Smithfield, Dublin. Market Report, Thursday, 10th July, 1919.—Increase of 99 beasts and of 475 sheep and lambs. Good selling trade for cattle, and late full rates well maintained. Sheep not quite so easily sold. Lambs in very good demand and dearer. Beef (live weight), 60/- to 88/- per cwt.; mutton, 1/4 to 1/8 per lb.; lambs, 30/- to 90/-.—(Advt.)

[illegible] tending upwards.—(Advt.)

ROBERT CRAIGIE'S REPORT, 37 Prussia street, Dublin, July 10th, 1919.—Supplies:—Cattle, 2,785—increase, 99; sheep, 9,963—increase, 475. Although the market for cattle opened slowly, all classes eventually met a good selling trade at a slight reduction in prices. Sheep trade steady, whilst lambs were fully 2/- per head dearer. Quotations:—Cattle (best), from 82/6 to 86/- per cwt., live weight; secondary, from 77/- to 81/-; cows, from 60/- to 80/-; sheep, from 1/3 to 1/7 per lb.; lambs, from 52/- to 87/6 each. Second Sale of Wool, Wednesday, 30th July.—(Advt.)

REPORT OF BERGIN, O'CONNOR, AND CO., LTD., Cattle Salesmen, 11 St. Joseph's road, Dublin, Thursday, July 10th, 1919.—Supplies:—Cattle, 2,785—increase, 99; sheep, 9,963—increase, 475. With a good attendance of buyers a satisfactory clearance of all classes of cattle was effected at prices similar to last week. Sheep sold slowly, and some lots unsold. Lambs of the best quality made higher prices, but thin lots were hard to clear. Quotations:—Cattle (best), 79/- to 85/- per cwt., live weight; secondary, 70/- to 78/- per cwt., live weight; cows, bulls, 60/- to 78/- per cwt., live weight; mutton, 1/3 to 1/7 per lb. N.B.—All sheep and lambs exposed for sale between 1st and 31st July must be accompanied by a certificate that they have been dipped since 1st June. Telephone No., 3860. Telegraphic Address, "Approve, Dublin."—(Advt.)

JOHN P. CUFFE, Auctioneer, Cattle and Sheep Salesman, 73 Prussia street, Dublin: Cattle Market Report, Thursday, July 10th, 1919.—Trade to-day was very similar to last week, and well finished cattle still coming very scarce to hand, prices remain unchanged, with a good selling trade and an early clearance. Sheep and lambs easier sold at prices slightly in seller's favour. Best beef, 80/- to 85/- per cwt.; mutton, 1/3 to 1/7 per lb.; lambs up to 86/- each. Auction of 70 Cocks First Crop Hay at Moortown, and Brackenstown, Swords, at 2 o'clock on Saturday next for Thomas Duff, Esq.; Auction of Wheat, Oats, and Potato Crop at Brackenstown, Swords, for Major O'Callaghan, on Wednesday next at 2 o'clock. Telephone, 4840. Telegrams, "Bullocks, Dublin."—(Advt.)

REPORT OF McKEOWN, MacKEOGH AND C., Auctioneers, Valuators, Farm Produce Factors, Live Stock Salesmen, etc., 4 Haymarket, July 10th.—Trade for good cattle remained about the same as last Thursday. In some cases a few prime lots made more. Good finished cows continue to meet a good demand. In the sheep department rates showed a slight improvement. Good lambs were dearer, and made a good clearance. Quotations:—Cattle, live weight, prime beef, 82/- to 86/- per cwt.; good secondary classes, including choice finished cows, 74/- to 80/-; mutton, 1/2 to 1/6 per lb.; lambs, 45/- to 80/- each. Pigs.—There was a smaller supply owing to the prevalence of strikes. The attendance of buyers was smaller than previous market, and after early sales price weakened. Live-weight tests show a drop of 3/- to 5/- per cwt. Stores were in fair demand. Quotations:—Dead weight, heavy pigs, including sows, 150/- to 155/- per cwt.; middle weight and light bacon pigs, 154/- to 157/6. 'Phone, Dublin, 3. Telegraphic address—"Factors, Dublin."—(Advt.)

LONDON METROPOLITAN, Thursday.—Fair supplies of fat cattle of various grades, also sheep, were brought forward at to-day's market, and allotted or sent down to kill at regulation prices, according to quality.

BIRMINGHAM, Thursday.—Pigs in short supply, and trade good at control prices, 21/- per score live weight, 28/- per score dead weight.

BRISTOL, Thursday.—Beef in small supply at 80/- to 85/- per cwt. live weight. Mutton short—Maximum, 1/3¼ per lb., plus skin, plus 3/-. No pigs. Little [illegible]

[illegible] American white clipped (36lbs.) July-August sold at 59/- per qr. CHINA HORSE BEANS and white PEAS firmly held for late extreme currencies.

MANCHESTER, Thursday.—Rather quiet market; foreign wheat slow at 80/- per quarter afloat and 82/- ex store here. English wheat none offering. Indian corn in small compass, and there is strong inquiry. Oats—Nothing doing in English; foreign now de-controlled, and selling under licence at up to 59/- per quarter. Barley steady.

BRISTOL, Thursday.—English wheat scarce; regulation price 76/6 per quarter. Fairly liberal allocations of foreign wheat have been made, and millers have bought more largely. Prices of oats firm, supply being short. Grinding barley dearer, and firm demand. Maize—Allocations insufficient for market; millers are unequal to demand.

PROVISIONS. — LIVERPOOL, Thursday. — BACON—There was practically no change in the bacon situation here, holders being steady in view of the firmness of the American c.i.f. position and predictions of a falling off in the arrivals here though continued large imports and heavy stocks in the meantime prevent any material improvement in prices being established. Buyers operate to a fair extent in Wiltshires and Cumberlands, but other cuts are only in moderate request. Wiltshires quoted 180/-, backs 179/- to 182/-, bellies 188/- to 192/-, and Cumberland 179/- to 181/- per cwt. HAMS remain firm and fairly active for short cut at 188/- to 190/-, with longs in moderate request at 188/- to 192/- per 112lbs. SHOULDERS quiet for squares at 158/- to 162/-, New Yorks 154/- to 156/-, and picnics more or less nominal at 138/- to 140/- per cwt. Canadian sells freely at 190/- for Wiltshires and 188/- Cumberlands, all box weights. Irish bacon scarce and wanted. LARD on the spot tends against buyers, with prime steam at 185/- and refined 192/- to 194/- per cwt. CHEESE fairly active at 1/3¼ per lb., delivered to retailers; supplies coming along more freely. Canadian free parcels quoted 160/- to 162/- per cwt. BUTTER firm, and finds ready acceptance whenever available. EGGS still quiet, and Irish hen again easier at 38/- to 39/-, but American unchanged at 29/-, and Canadian 31/- to 32/- per 120.

REFINED LARD "FUTURES" MARKET—Liverpool, Thursday.—Higher prices were bidding for July and September delivery—viz., 193/6 and 194/-, with 195/- wanted for the former, but no business resulted in either position.

JAMES I. HALPIN, Wholesale Bacon Merchant, 18-19 Thomas st., Dublin. Telegrams—"Middles." 'Phones 1716. Specialising in O'Mara's, Ltd., products.—(Advt.)

DUBLIN VEGETABLE, Thursday.—There was a very good supply of all kinds of stuff on market this morning for a Thursday fixture. Demand good. Features of sales averaged:—Red currants, 12/6 to 14/- per box, 6/- to 7/- per tray; black ditto, 9/- to 10/6 per box; gooseberries, 7/3 to 8/6 per half-bushel, 4/- to 7/6 per float; peas, 2/- to 3/9 and 4/6 per half-bushel; beans, 2/- to 2/3 per tray; tomatoes, 1/- to 1/4 per lb.; York cabbage, 20/- to 40/- and 54/- per load; cauliflowers, 2/3 to 3/9 and 4/- per dozen; salad, 3d. to 6½d. per dozen; turnips, 4d. to 6d. and 9d. per bundle; carrots, 1/3 to 2/- per dozen bunches; Tripoli onions, 7d. to 8d. and 1/1 per bundle; scallions, 6d. to 10d. per bundle; celery, 6d. to 9d. per bunch; rhubarb, 2/- to 3/- per dozen bundles; thyme, 3d. to 4d. per bunch; parsley, 6d. to 1/- per float; new potatoes, 2/- to 2/9 per stone.

DUBLIN FISH, Thursday.—There was a heavy general supply of fish on market to-day, including fair country and local arrivals, together with 362 boxes of mixed stuff from three steamers. Other features were—48 packages salmon, 25 chests lobsters, 30 packages herrings, and 12 of mackerel. Prices were on the cheap side, except for best selections of fresh steamer stuff, haddock, hake, and cod especially. Lobsters were again a glut, and sold at very cheap rates. There was some disappointment in securing satisfactory prices for Dublin Bay herrings. Leading sales averaged following prices:—Salmon, 2/- to 2/2 per lb.; grilse, 1/6 to 1/10 per lb.; trout, 10d. to 1/- and 1/6 per lb.; large live lobsters, 10/- per 13; seconds, 3/- to 5/-, and small, etc., 2/6 to 4/- per 13; large soles, 25/- to 30/- per 9 pairs; mediums, 15/- to 20/-; slips, 8/- to 10/- per 9 pairs; large plaice, 3/- to 4/- per 4; medium, 2/- to 3/- per 6 and 8; half-boxes of plaice, 20/- to 40/-. Steamer fish [illegible]

[illegible] SPICE—Pepper quietly steady. RICE in fair demand regarding Siam, and market firm. JUTE sparingly offered and market firm, with business largely confined to special marks, particulars of which are not allowed to transpire. HEMP—Manila firm, with steady inquiries. SHELLAC firm. GAMBIER steady. COPRA firm, quiet. TEA—Ceylon auctions totalled 12,000 packages, for which there was a generally good demand in force at fairly steady prices. RUBBER market steady, with trade of moderate extent; plantation crepe spot sold 1/9⅞, July 1/9⅞, August-September 1/10¼, October 1/11, January-June buyers 2/-; ribbed standard smoked sheet spot sold 1/8¼, July 1/8½; fine hard Para spot 2/5 per lb. OILS—Linseed firm; spot naked, ex mill, 125/-. Rape, crude spot 105/-, refined 110/-. China wood, spot 118/-, July-August 110/-. Cocoanut, Cochin afloat 98/-, Ceylon 96/-, Japanese 94/-. Manila—Scarcely anything on offer. Castor oil firm. Turpentine firmer; American, spot 88/-, September-December Lagos 89/6, barrels included. Petroleum unchanged. OILSEEDS—Linseed quiet. Rapeseed firm. Cottonseed quiet.

CLYDE CRUSHED SUGAR, Thursday.—To-day's report says that market continues without change.

MISCELLANEOUS. — LIVERPOOL COTTON (Second Report), Thursday.—American—An improvement in business; quotations advanced 93 points. Brazilian quotations are raised 93 points. East Indian quotations advanced 50 points. Egyptian—Good business done. Sales, 4,000 bales; imports, nil. Market is quiet.

LIVERPOOL COTTON (Closing), Thursday.—Sales 4,000 bales, imports nil. American—An improvement in business; quotations advanced 93 points; Brazilian quotations are raised 93 points; East Indian quotations advanced 50 points; Egyptian good business done. July 21.50d., August 21.25d., September 21.13d., October 21.10d., January 20.75d., March 20.55d. Market is steady.

HAY AND STRAW.—LONDON, Thursday.—Fair supplies are coming forward, and meet a steady sale at full Government limits, according to quality.

MANCHESTER HAY AND STRAW, Thursday.—On the Produce Exchange it was reported that business was very restricted owing to scarcity, and higher prices noted last week maintained. The outlook as to supplies is not promising. Quotations:—Lincolnshire mixture and meadow hay £10 18/6 to £12; oat straw, 100/- to 105/-; wheat straw, 85/-, delivered Manchester.

WOOL.—BRADFORD, Thursday.—Botany yarns and tops above fifties quality are very firm. Medium and coarse crossbred tops are slightly easier to buy, and yarns are in a similar position. Most spinners have received more of these qualities from the Department than they expected, and this has satisfied the demand for the time being at lower prices than topmakers are wanting. Bradford merchants are not yet quoting home wools.

LONDON METALS MARKET.

The market for TIN proved rather firmer, with a fair inquiry in force, while sellers offered sparingly. Cash 10/- and forward 20/- to 25/- per ton higher than Wednesday's closing level. Cash £250 to £250 10/-, three months £248 10/- to £249, settlement price £250 10/-. Sales 350 tons; middle August done £248, three months at £248 up to £250, then £249. COPPER 35/- to 40/- per ton lower than Wednesday's closing figures: standard, cash £95 10/- to £96, 3 months £96 10/- to £97, settlement price £96. Some 1,400 tons changed hands; electros £100 to £105. LEAD firm, and soft foreign quoted £23 12/6 to £23 17/6 per ton as to position. SPELTER easy at £41 15/- to £52 as to position.

THE EYES IN DANGER

The eyes are the windows of the soul, therefore preserve them, protect them, keep them as beautiful as they were originally intended to be. The incipient danger is generally indicated by difficulty to read comfortably or see distant objects clearly. Dixon and Hempenstall, State Opticians, 111 Grafton street, supply Visual Remedies and Tone Lenses, which will arrest the decline of vision, and counteract impending dangers to the eyes.
